INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fished product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquérir les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

“How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?”

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

“Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?”

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back.
Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

1988 international assessment of science and mathematics : B.C. summary report

Victoria : Ministry of Education, Student Assessment, 1989. II, 14 p. : ill.
MICROLOG 96-05569 (1 fiche)

Summarises results from an international assessment of grade 7 to 9 students in science and mathematics, comparing the performance of British Columbia students with those from New Brunswick, Ontario, Quebec, Ireland, Korea, Spain, the United Kingdom, and the United States. Results are also given from the surveys conducted as part of the assessment, asking students about their background and attitudes, degree of science participation in the home, and the relationship between homework and achievement and between television viewing and achievement. Implications of the assessment are outlined.

The 1994/95 spruce beetle damage survey

By Mike LeBlanc and Bob Guscott. Halifax : Dept. of Natural Resources, 1995. 17 p. : ill., Bibl. (Insectary publications series / Nova Scotia. Dept. of Natural Resources ; no. 4)
MICROLOG 96-05515 (1 fiche)

The spruce beetle is an insect native to Nova Scotia and is primarily an enemy of mature and overmature spruce. In Nova Scotia the preferred host is white spruce, but all species of spruce can be attacked. During August and September 1994 and September 1995 aerial surveys were conducted that concentrated in locations that contain stands of white spruce growing on abandoned farmland; and red spruce occurring in old growth stands. Information is presented on the survey results, biology, and methods of control. The appendix contains a forest pest leaflet on the spruce beetle. It provides a description, the life history and habits, detection, prevention of outbreaks, natural controls, and applied controls.

MICROLOG 96-05701 (1 fiche)

La Société canadienne d'hypothèques et de logement a parrainé un symposium d'un jour sur l'Abordabilité du logement dans une société en évolution. Le symposium visait deux objectifs principaux : susciter une prise de conscience et encourager la discussion relativement à certaines questions concernant l'abordabilité du logement; élaborer un plan de recherche sur ces questions. Après chaque exposé, un panel de cinq spécialistes a fait part de ses réactions, puis il y a eu discussion générale entre tous les participants. La dernière partie du symposium a été consacrée à un débat ouvert sur les "Prochaines étapes : Plan de recherche et autres initiatives de suivi". Les participants comprenaient des représentants des gouvernements, de l'industrie du logement, du secteur privé et des universités. Au total, 53 personnes ont participé au symposium, en comptant le président, les conférenciers, les modérateurs et les cinq spécialistes du panel.

Aboriginal economic development : literature review and analysis -- First draft

Prepared by Robin McLay ; for Linda Beltrano. Victoria : British Columbia, 1993. 54 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-05567 (1 fiche)

Reviews a wide range of literature (including journal articles, research reports, government reports, case studies, policy papers, books, and unpublished manuscripts) on the barriers to Aboriginal economic development. Topics covered in the review include the building of organisational capacity, education and training needed to facilitate economic development, recognition of culture as a part of Aboriginal economic development, financing and access to capital, joint ventures, and participation from the private sector. Case studies are presented to illustrate the complex interactions between the various topics discussed and to provide examples of successful community-driven Aboriginal economic development initiatives in Canada.

This paper has been prepared to develop a framework for an Aboriginal economic development policy which would assist British Columbia to further Aboriginal self-sufficiency. It is designed to stimulate and support consultations among all key stakeholders, including Aboriginal entrepreneurs, enterprises, and businesses; key target groups in the Aboriginal community; federal and provincial departments and agencies; and non-Aboriginal private sector organisations and institutions. The work conducted to develop this paper included a review of Aboriginal economic development programs in other provinces, a literature search on the constraints on Aboriginal economic development, collection of data on the socio-economic conditions of provincial Aboriginals, and holding of workshops and consultations. Results of this work are presented along with the guiding principles for an Aboriginal economic development framework, an implementation strategy, and a list of specific economic development initiatives. The appendix includes an overview of existing federal and provincial programs that focus on Aboriginal economic development.

Summarises baseline studies conducted to determine the accuracy level of Garmin SRVY II code-correlating global positioning system (GPS) receivers, and presents some preliminary results from typical field applications in forestry. In the accuracy tests, the GPS antenna was positioned on a surveyed control point and two types of data were gathered, averaged positions and dynamic positions. Results are given for standard GPS, post-processed GPS, and real-time differential GPS using radio modems and US Coast Guard signals. The field trials included both ground and aerial applications, mapping forest access roads and flight lines.

A report to the Workers' Compensation Board on cor pulmonale (fiche 93-00172) was published in 1992. The Occupational Disease Panel received responses to the report generally supporting its findings but recognising a need for standard criteria to aid in diagnosis of cor pulmonale, and acknowledgement of the difficulty of attributing exclusive cause of the cor pulmonale to the compensated lung condition. To address issues raised by those responses and by Board staff, a special committee was formed to develop guidelines to assist adjudicators and physicians in the possible early identification of cor pulmonale. This document presents the committee findings and recommendations. It includes a definition of cor pulmonale, information on its diagnosis and investigation, and answers to questions posed by the Board regarding the respiratory diseases likely to lead to cor pulmonale, the time taken for such diseases to progress to cor pulmonale, the possibility of distinguishing between work- and non-work-related cor pulmonale, and treatment of cor pulmonale.

Ambient air monitoring in Ontario provides information on the actual concentration of selected pollutants in various communities. Air quality data are used in various programs to address key air issues. This report tracks two kinds of trends: air concentrations based on actual direct measurements of pollutant concentrations in the air at selected sites across the province; and emissions, which are estimates of the total tonnage of these pollutants released into the atmosphere annually, based upon the best available engineering calculations. This report summarizes air quality in Ontario for the year.

Two airports were chosen for case studies, one representing a large airport (Toronto) and one representing a medium-size airport (Hamilton). The scope of the study was limited to baggage handling issues from arrival at the airport to exiting the terminal to the plane for departures, and from entering the terminal after deplaning to returning to a vehicle in the parking area. Physical demands were grouped into four common categories (travelling without baggage, baggage handling, waiting, and travelling with baggage) and the sources of demand within each airport were investigated. Shortcomings are identified in the areas of facility design, physical layout, and signage. Recommendations are provided to address the physical demands identified in the study.

Ce document fait état du bien-fondé de la gestion de l'énergie dans les villes canadiennes et des pratiques courantes dans ce domaine, en insistant particulièrement sur les avantages environnementaux. Il donne les résultats d'une étude traitant de l'amélioration de l'environnement par la gestion de l'énergie dans les villes canadiennes, privilégiant les pratiques les plus efficaces et les bienfaits de programmes innovateurs. Il formule également des observations quant aux raisons pour lesquelles les municipalités canadiennes font appel aux programmes de gestion de l'énergie, traite des obstacles que les municipalités doivent surmonter ainsi que des aspects communs essentiels à la réussite. Les annexes contiennent de la documentation concernant l'offre et la demande de combustibles et d'électricité au Canada de même que les répercussions sur l'environnement, se référant particulièrement à l'énergie en milieu urbain et au dossier de l'environnement.

The objective of this study was to examine reproductive indices in fish collected from the Peace, Athabasca, and Slave rivers and their major tributaries. The fish species targeted for collection and analyses were burbot, northern pike, longnose sucker, and flathead chub. Biochemical and histological approaches included analysing levels of gonadal sex steroid hormones, measuring gonad morphology, and estimating fecundity. Results are organised in to reference (upstream locations and tributaries receiving no inputs from pulp mills), near-field (within 100 kilometres downstream from a pulp mill source), and far-field (over 100 kilometres downstream) groups.

Vitamin A (retinoids) and E (tocopherol) have received increasing attention as possible indicators of exposure to a variety of environmental pollutants. This study examines vitamin A and E indices in fish collected from northern Alberta rivers, where fish are exposed to a variety of industrial effluents, as part of a multi-faceted study into altered fish physiological function due to environmental contaminants. The fish species targeted for collection were burbot, northern pike, and longnose sucker. The investigators conducted biochemical analyses in the laboratory to determine levels of retinol, dehydroretinol, retinyl palmitate (three storage forms of vitamin A), beta carotene (precursor form of vitamin A), and tocopherol in fish livers. For comparison, results are organised into reference (upstream locations and tributaries receiving no input from pulp mills), near-field (within 100 kilometres downstream from a pulp mill source), and far-field (over 100 kilometres downstream) groups, where sample sizes were adequate.

In September 1993, the Sahtu Tribal Council (the predecessor to the Sahtu Secretariat Incorporated), the Government of the Northwest Territories and the Government of Canada signed the Sahtu Dene and Metis Comprehensive Land Claim Agreement. By virtue of this Agreement coming into effect on June 23, 1994, an estimated 2,000 Sahtu Dene and Metis became the owners of 41,437 square kilometres of land in the Northwest Territories. The Agreement clarifies rights of ownership and land and resource use in the Sahtu settlement area. It also allows for the negotiation of self-government agreements which will be brought into effect through federal legislation. This annual report briefly discusses the implementation Committee, the implementing bodies, and provides a summary of activities for each of the governing bodies involved. CA ND NO NP PA PR SS

By E.E. Matten. Toronto : Dept. of Mines & Northern Affairs, 1972. v, 154 p.
MICROLOG 96-05776 (2 fiche)

The present volume of the annual report on mineral industry operations is issued in continuance of the series of reports on mining operations in Ontario. The content of the report and survey method used are basically the same; only the name of the report has been altered to reflect the vertically integrated form of the industry. For the purpose of this report, mineral industry is defined as the aggregate of industrial establishments engaged in the extraction, concentration or beneficiation, smelting and refining or equivalent processing of ores, non-metallic minerals and mineral fuels. A summary of operations is provided, separating the metallics, non-metallics and fuels, and structural materials. An index is included.

Anti-carbonation coatings for use on Canadian buildings

Carbonation of concrete occurs when atmospheric carbon dioxide dissolves within the concrete pore structure and reacts with various components in the cured concrete, reducing its natural alkalinity. If the carbonation front reaches reinforcing steel, the steel can corrode if sufficient water and oxygen are present. This report presents preliminary findings from a study conducted to establish a test protocol for evaluating the effectiveness of various anti-carbonation coatings in field applications, and to install anti-carbonation coatings in designated test panels and perform initial tests to establish existing carbonation conditions. Suitable anti-carbonation products were selected for the tests based on carbon dioxide resistance, water vapour permeance, and water resistance. Initial cores were taken from each test area to determine the base levels of carbonation, and phenolphthalein testing was used to measure carbonation depth.

Computational chemistry involves a wide range of activities in modelling chemical systems. The explosion in computational and graphical power available on the latest computers has led to a corresponding growth in computational chemistry techniques such that it is now possible to model real systems sufficiently well and obtain quantitative predictive results. This report has the objective of determining whether the advantages of computational chemistry can be applied to Defence Research Establishment Suffield's chemical-biological defence program. It identifies areas of application for computational chemistry and considers how a computational chemistry program could be implemented. Issues considered include the use of outside contractors versus in-house expertise, resources that could be used to establish the program, and hardware and software requirements. Includes a summary of program recommendations and a list of projects ranked according to the likelihood of their successful implementation.

Apprehension

By Lisa Martz. Victoria : Gove Inquiry Into Child Protection, 1995. 90 p.
MICROLOG 96-05748 (1 fiche)

Begins with a review of the statutory authority for apprehending children deemed in need of protection under the British Columbia Family & Child Service Act (FCSA) and of the Ministry of Social Services policy related to apprehension. The second section outlines the apprehension process, including the role of social workers and police, the effect of placement availability, and documentation requirements. The third section describes the role of the social worker in the court process and their experience with that process. The fourth section reviews the procedures and principles involved in the judicial determination that a child is in need of protection, as well as the awareness and attitudes of social workers concerning the relevant law. The fifth section compares the FCSA with the Child, Family & Community Services Act. The final sections present a comparative analysis of child protection statutes in other Canadian jurisdictions and recommendations regarding the apprehension process. The appendix contains copies of Ministry forms used in apprehension.

Describes a project to design an optimum hull form for a tanker used to transport oil from the Canadian Beaufort Sea either westward or eastward via specified Arctic sea routes to markets in Japan or Europe. The work included conceptual design, costing, and a trafficability study using the TRANSIM model. The study included transshipment in the Berling Sea or Davis Strait to open-water or lower ice class ships, or direct voyages to market without transshipment. The conceptual design was based on a prototype selected from previous work and optimised in terms of lowest freight rate, qualified by the circumstances as appropriate. The optimisation considered a range of ships with different cargo dead-weight capacity in different operating scenarios defined in terms of route, length of operating season, use of transshipment, and amount of off-season revenue.

These plots are established and assessed by the Forest Insect & Disease Survey (FIDS) of the Canadian Forest Service. The role of FIDS is to identify the types and degree of damage to forests, whether caused by natural factors such as insects, diseases, and weather, or anthropogenic factors such as management practices and air pollution. The health of conifer and hardwood species is described. This document discusses methods used, terrestrial ecozones, forest health & its evaluation, forest health in Canada's ecozones (Atlantic maritime, mixedwood plains, boreal shield or plains, taiga plains, montane or boreal cordillera, and Pacific maritime) and it provides conclusions.

This analysis is directed at the automotive painter who refinishes motor vehicle bodies by sanding, spot filling, priming, conditioning and painting, drying or baking newly painted surfaces, and related activities. The analysis identifies tasks and sub-tasks performed by an automotive painter, arranged in blocks of distinct operations relevant to that occupation. These blocks include workplace safety, vehicle preparation, refinishing, detailing, and employment skills. For each task, the document outlines the element of skill and knowledge that an individual must acquire to perform the task adequately, identifies any shifts or changes in technology that affect the task, lists tools and equipment required for the task, and provides an indication of whether the task has been validated by each province and territory. The appendix includes a glossary, a list of tools and equipment used in the occupation, and a tabulation of the percentage of time a worker spends performing each block and task in a given year (by province/territory and for Canada as a whole). This study tested the theory that the practical success of the wind chill index is attributable to the effect of wind on heat transfer from the bare skin, usually the face. The effect of wind speed on heat transfer from a thermal model of a head was investigated in a wind tunnel. A mathematical model of heat transfer from the face was developed and compared to other models of wind chill. Skin temperatures calculated from the model were examined for their consistency with observations of frostbite and discomfort at a range of wind speeds and temperatures. Wind chill equivalent temperatures were also recalculated on the basis of facial cooling, and an equivalent temperature increment was derived to account for the effect of bright sunshine. ### BC's first heritage rivers : government's response to the BC Heritage Rivers Board's nominations

Prepared by Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks...et al. Victoria : The Province, 1996. v. 11 p. ISBN 0-7726-2750-9 MICROLOG 96-05655 (1 fiche)

In September 1995, the British Columbia Heritage Rivers Board submitted its recommendations regarding recognition of eight rivers as the inaugural candidates for a provincial heritage rivers system. The Board also recommended a vision and management objectives for each nominated river. This document presents the British Columbia government response to the Board recommendations, modifying the Board's river-specific visions and management objectives to ensure their consistency with plans and planning processes. The government also endorsed one recommendation nominating one of the rivers to the Canadian Heritage Rivers system. BC NR PR SC

This report consists of a complete business plan to build and operate a cattle feedlot, designed to be used by individuals and groups in Saskatchewan who wish to start or expand a commercial cattle feedlot in their vicinity. The investment levels and operation plans are for a one-time capacity of 20,000 head, but can be adjusted to any required size of feedlot. The plan assumes construction of the facilities to begin in April of the first year of operation, to be ready to receive the cattle in the fall of that year. The business plan includes a human resources plan, a marketing plan, an operations plan, and a financial plan. Projected cash flow statements, income statements, and balance sheets are included for the first five years of operation. AG CO MS PR SC

Biodiversity in British Columbia : our changing environment

This book consists of a collection of individual papers surveying the existing knowledge of biodiversity in British Columbia. The first section contains papers that consider the importance of an ecosystem-centred approach to the conservation of biodiversity, explain the methods of classifying the status of rare species, and review the role of biosystematics and taxonomy in the study of biodiversity. The second section focuses on the diversity of species in British Columbia, with papers on specific species or groups such as lepidoptera, marine invertebrates, lichens, bryophytes, fish, fungi, mammals, birds, reptiles, and vascular plants. Part three summarises information on the diversity of the province's ecosystems, with papers on such topics as forests, grasslands, marine areas, urban areas, and atmospheric change. The final section discusses ways of protecting biodiversity, concluding with a summary of recommendations for biodiversity conservation. BC CA LS ND NR SC

BioSIM is a software package that helps in the application of phenology and other seasonal forecasting simulation models of temperature-dependent processes to areas of ecological research and pest management. BioSIM performs essentially two tasks: production of geographically specific temperature forecasts and prediction of seasonal events from these forecasts using temperature-driven simulation models. Both tasks involve managing weather databases, running simulation models, and producing reports. This document describes the installation and use of BioSIM, database management in BioSIM, running of simulations using BioSIM, the use of graphical and statistical tools to analyse model outputs, the projection of model-output features to the landscape level, and miscellaneous functions of the software.

BioSIM est un logiciel qui a été conçu pour faciliter l'application de modèles de simulation régis par la température pour la lutte contre les insectes nuisibles. La mise en application de BioSIM comporte trois étapes principales. La première, décrite à la section 1, consiste à installer le logiciel sur une plate-forme appropriée. La deuxième étape consiste à constituer les bases de données météorologiques qui seront utilisées par le système. L'obtention et l'entrée des normales de température, ainsi que l'établissement d'un système pour recueillir et mettre à jour les données météorologiques en temps réel et les prévisions sur cinq jours, nécessitent un investissement initial considérable. La troisième étape a pour but d'intégrer, lorsqu'il y a lieu, de nouveaux modèles de simulation à la base de données du logiciel. La section 2 traite en détail de la gestion des bases de données météorologiques et de la base de données. La section 3 présente une description détaillée de l'exécution des simulations à l'aide du contrôleur de modèles de BioSIM. Enfin, les sections 4 et 5 décrivent des méthodes pour examiner et analyser les résultats des simulations et produire des projections à l'échelle du paysage à partir des sorties de modèles.

Presents and discusses results of a survey of the abundance and distribution of migratory and resident birds on the Campbell River estuary, located on the east coast of Vancouver Island. The surveys were conducted from fall 1982 to March 1984 and recorded 125 species, the most abundant being from the gull group. An annotated species list discusses arrival and departure dates, highest number seen in any one day, habitat use, and other details. Concluding comments note human impacts, particularly from direct disturbance of birds using the estuary.

Black spruce advance growth : its potential in northwestern Ontario

Advance growth generally refers to stems of layer or seed origin, suppressed at time of logging, which are highly clumped and uneven in height and age. The possibility of integrating advance growth with other silvicultural techniques is a viable option for black spruce since seeding or planting is expensive and desired stocking levels are not always achieved. This paper presents a study that documented the abundance, distribution, and vigour of pre- and post-harvest advance growth in black spruce mixedwood and black spruce-moss sites in north-western Ontario. The study objective was to investigate attributes of advance growth by site type and its potential as a silvicultural option for resource managers in that region. Results are presented of advance growth density, stocking, and selected growth data collected from 36 black spruce stands ranging in age from 50 to 160 years.

The Bob Creek study area is located north of the Oldman River east of the Livingstone Range in Alberta. It encompasses some 225 square kilometres of the province's most scenic rangeland. The objectives of this study were to prepare an ecological and land classification map, to examine relationships between elk use and winter climate, to investigate present and historical range use patterns by elk, to document and measure areas of vegetation encroachment, and to identify potential areas for winter habitat enhancement for elk. The study describes elk habitat requirements, the physiography of the study area and its climate, current and historical range use patterns by elk as determined from rancher interviews and aerial surveys, and vegetation patterns and trends in the study area. It ends with recommendations for elk winter range enhancement.

The British Columbia high technology sector : input/output analysis

A joint project of BC STATS and the Science and Technology Division of the Ministry of Employment and Investment. Victoria : BC Stats ; Ministry of Government Services, 1996. 20 p. : ill. MICROLOG 96-05570 (1 fiche)

Assesses the impact of the high technology sector on the British Columbia economy, using the BC 1990 Input/Output model. The study procedure involved three steps: definition of the high technology sector in terms of a set of selected high technology commodities and industries; concordance of the high technology industries classified according to the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification to corresponding industries in the model classification, and re-estimation of high technology weights for the selected industries; and estimation of economic impacts due to inter-industry linkages of the high technology sector with the provincial economy. Comparisons between 1984 and 1990 are made with regard to the relative size of various segments of the high technology sector in the province. Comparisons are also made between the economic impacts of the high technology sector and those of other sectors. The appendix outlines the major assumptions and caveats respecting the input-output model.

Reviews the cost saving estimates for the federal government's intended policy to de-staff the 35 remaining lightstations in British Columbia, and examines whether the province could run the staffed lightstations without any additional costs to taxpayers. Specific issues studied were: to examine closely the Canadian Coast Guard cost estimates for the lightstations, especially the allocated transportation costs; develop estimates of possible revenues from a number of possible service agreements with the federal government; investigate the extent to which capital expenditures required to achieve de-staffing could be made available to the province, in return for continued staffing by the province; examine the potential for additional revenue generation from sources such as boating licenses; develop an appropriate management and administrative model, along with the related costs; and research the effects of the Coast Guard's proposed recreational boater safety initiatives on the lightstation issue.

The aim of this report is to describe the patterns and trends of cancer survival in Ontario. The presentation focuses on survival rates for specific types of cancer to indicate the variability of prognosis or disease severity. The source data refer to cancer patients diagnosed in the Ontario population from 1969 to 1988; patient survival is described in terms of three measures (crude survival rate, relative survival rate, and median survival time). The variation in relative survival rates is examined for such factors as primary cancer site, sex, age, period of diagnosis, and histologic type. Report chapters provide detailed descriptions of methods used in this project, followed by results for specific types of cancer, and an overview of the results for all types of cancer. For each type of cancer, the results are in a standardised format consisting of text, table, and plots of survival curves.

The Manitoba government has embarked on a process to adopt a sustainable development strategy for the whole province. This document presents the strategy for the province's capital region, consisting of the city of Winnipeg, the towns of Selkirk and Stonewall, and 13 surrounding rural municipalities. The strategy is presented under five policy areas: partnerships, settlement, economy, environment and resources, and human resources. For each policy area, the document lists policy objectives, policies, and actions to be taken (with the sector responsible for implementing the action identified). The document concludes with an outline of the strategy review and amendment process. Includes glossary.

This study of case management practice and systems in child protection services in British Columbia 1986-94 consists of five chapters. The first chapter outlines the study process and traces the historical development of the province's child welfare services up to the re-organisation of 1988, providing background for examining various models of case management. Chapter two focuses on various case management approaches as found in the literature, and discusses the strengths and weaknesses of these models on the basis of their potential viability for the British Columbia child welfare system. Chapter three describes and analyses the present mandate, structure, and relationships of child and family services by examining relevant legislation, current policies, procedures, and practices. Chapter four reviews and analyses the future direction for child protection as proposed by the Ministry of Social Services, based on a recently designed case management framework and other announced initiatives pertaining to case management. The study concludes with recommendations for improving the case management system.

Presents a study of the development of electrodes for decomposing hydrogen sulphide in aqueous solutions. The study objective was to create a chemically modified anode that combines electrochemical control with a molecular size and shape selectivity, as well as the catalytic activity of zeolites. Background information is included on hydrogen sulphide decomposition, the concept of zeolite modified electrodes and their role in the decomposition reaction, and the role of catalysts. Experiments described in the study include preparation of active materials for the modified electrode, preparation of electrodes, and testing of the modified electrodes in three types of electrolytic cells. Results compare the performance of the modified electrodes to that of unmodified and carbon or metal electrodes in terms of capacity for sulphur production from hydrogen sulphide.

A Conceptual framework of social well-being : background papers

Toronto : Roehrer Institute, 1993. 177 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 96-05308 (3 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

The first background paper in this compendium proposes that the concept of social well-being can serve as a guiding aim for a conceptual framework that would provide an alternative orientation to defining standards for judging the structure and operation of government. It defines social well-being and discusses sources and procedures for defining a list of societal commitments. The second paper examines aspects of disadvantage in Canadian society, including poverty, abuse, institutional barriers, and cultural devaluation, and evaluates the societal commitments developed to address disadvantage. The third paper examines the relationship between the economy, the labour market, and social well-being, considering such issues as the inadequacy of traditional measures of economic prosperity, the challenges of international competition, and the creation of alternative institutional arrangements through which the needs of the population can be met. The fourth paper poses six questions on understanding the impact of the international economy on the Canadian economy, labour market, and position in world affairs. The final paper addresses the role of government in achieving social well-being, exploring the idea of the welfare state in theory and practice and examining an alternative role for government.

Cette étude a pour but d'examiner la manière dont la Maison évolutive peut être adaptée à une méthode de production industrialisée au moyen de panneaux préfabriqués, ainsi que d'en établir les répercussions sur les plans de la qualité, de l'économie et de la performance technique. Le projet comportait une méthode d'évaluation couramment employée en Amérique du Nord, une adaptation du design, de même qu'une estimation comparative du prix de revient de panneaux préfabriqués et des méthodes de construction traditionnelles. Les points précis qui y sont abordés sont les suivants : portée et objectifs ; étude des panneaux et des produits ; adaptation du plan ; et, analyse des coûts. CA ND PL PR QU SC

A review of Defence Research Establishment Atlantic's computing requirements has resulted in the decision to replace the ageing VAX 6420 VMS mainframe cluster with a number of RISC-based Alpha workstations. As a result, much of the code now resident on the mainframe cluster, including the VAST finite element code, must be ported to these new platforms. This report presents details related to the development and incorporation of Alpha versions of each of the three VAST codes (VASGEN, VAST, and VASTG). Problems encountered during the code conversion are noted. CA ND PS SC

Coroners' recommendations for Ministry of Social Services arising from the deaths of children and youths

By Karen Ryan. Victoria : Gove Inquiry into Child Protection, 1995. 42 p. MICROLOG 96-05753 (1 fiche)

Reviews British Columbia coroners' cases involving children or youth which led to recommendations for the Ministry of Social Services. Begins with an overview of the relevant legislation, policies, and procedures which govern the roles and functions of the Coroners Service and the Ministry's Family & Children's Services Division in relation to child deaths that fall within their respective mandates. Eight cases which led to recommendations for the Ministry during May 1985 to October 1994, along with the recommendations arising from these cases and the Ministry's response, are then reviewed. Finally, an attempt is made to track the changes made to Ministry policies, procedures, and staff as a result of coroners' cases. BC CI JU PR SA SS

Cost/benefit analysis of lighter urban transit buses

Average curb weight of urban buses in Canada increased 25% from 1972 to 1992, with consequent increases in costs. This study assesses the cost effectiveness of operating light weight urban transit buses, with the aim of raising awareness and to encourage industry and governments to provide the necessary funding to develop and deploy such buses. The study involved gathering of all available information on capital and operating costs of full size and lightweight buses, and comparing this to cost data for conventional urban buses. Costs associated with road damage caused by buses and social benefits such as air quality improvement are also considered. The principal weight-related cost variables considered are those related to fuel consumption and brake and tire wear. Experiences of very light buses in urban areas are also reviewed. CA ND SC TR

Au cours des dernières années, la présence au Canada d'individus qui, en tant que Nazis ou collaborateurs, auraient commis des crimes de guerre en Europe II y a 40 ou 45 ans a soulevé plusieurs questions : Combien de ces individus résident actuellement au Canada ? Comment se sont-ils retrouvés ici ? Doivent-ils faire l'objet d'une enquête et, éventuellement, de poursuites ? Dans ce cas, de quelle façon faut-il procéder pour les traduire en justice ? Comme il n'existait aucune étude officielle sur cette question, on a constitué la Commission Deschênes en 1985 pour qu'elle enquête sur ce sujet et en fasse rapport dans ce document. CA DE EX JU SS

Karen Ryan ; with research assistance from Eric Jones and Susan Furlong. Victoria : Gove Inquiry into Child Protection, 1995. 86 p. : ill.
MICROLOG 96-05745 (1 fiche)

Presents a review of British Columbia Family & Children's Services (F&CS) Division critical incident reports, which are required to be made when children in care die or suffer serious injuries; also examines superintendent inquiries and Audit & Review Division reviews, which are required when there are suspicious or unusual circumstances associated with death or critical injury of a child. The review includes information on characteristics of reported incidents, such as number of cases, victim and family characteristics, nature of incident, nature of F&CS contact with family, types of protection complaints received, other agencies involved, and involvement of the coroner's office and criminal justice system. Case practice themes identified during the examination are discussed, such as non-compliance with F&CS policy and procedures, lack of interagency co-operation, faulty assessments, and inadequate investigation. Shortcomings in the superintendent's office and critical incident review policies are identified and recommendations are made regarding reform of the current system of reporting, documenting, and investigating critical incidents relating to children in care.

provides two levels of information. At the first level, a complete list of the species and populations of amphibians, reptiles, birds, and mammals in British Columbia, plus the subspecies and populations at risk, shows the presence or absence of these species in each of eight biogeoclimatic zonal groups. At the second level, species designated at risk and those with regionally significant habitat relationships are examined. The document includes definitions of database fields, data files, and file structures. The appendix includes a table of zonal groups and subzone groups of wildlife, and definitions of broad habitat classes.

Several aspects of HMLE were investigated, including extraction efficiency, speed, accuracy, and precision. The performance HMLE was compared to that of the currently used Ontario Ministry of Environment & Energy method OWOC-E3120B, and was tested on groundwater samples known to be contaminated with PCBs and chlorinated benzenes. Experimentation with SPME, a solventless single-step extraction procedure, involved optimisation of extraction and desorption conditions using spiked water samples. Recoveries achievable with SPME are noted and the efficiency of SPME is compared to that of HMLE. The feasibility of using either method as an alternative to OWOC-E3120B is also assessed.

Development of long-term biomonitoring in Elk Island National Park using benthic macroinvertebrates

Surface waters in Elk Island National Park are mostly lentic (standing water) systems and intermittent streams. Potential disturbances and contaminants in the park's aquatic systems include deposition of airborne contaminants, wastewater from the Astotin Lake sewage plant, and runoff from nearby agricultural land and a golf course; the long-term effects of these factors on the park's aquatic environments are not known. This report presents a study of the use of benthic macroinvertebrates for long-term biomonitoring in the park. It includes a literature review of long-term biomonitoring methods using benthic macroinvertebrates in lentic habitats; and an inventory of the composition and abundance of common benthic macroinvertebrates in the littoral habitats close to the outlets of Astotin Lake and Bailey Lake (the latter not generally affected by human activities). Differences in the ma-De plus en plus, les Canadiens et Canadiennes se rendent compte que la croissance économique et la prospérité future son tributaires d'une pleine mise en valeur des avantages et des possibilités d'avancement offerts par les sciences et la technologie. Ce rapport fait état des réalisations à cet effet. Il décrit notamment une grande innovation, le Service de placement électronique, un projet pilote qui fait appel à l'Internet pour permettre aux employeurs de trouver rapidement des chercheurs d'emploi dont les compétences correspondent aux exigences des postes à combler. Il présente également le tout nouveau Réseau de prestation de services, un réseau national de plusieurs centaines de bureaux et de kiosques d'information électronique, qui offrira aux Canadiennes et aux Canadiens des renseignements sur les programmes et les services de DRHC.

Les secteurs public, privé et communautaire du Canada reconnaissent qu'il est urgent de prendre des mesures de protection de l'environnement. De plus en plus, les municipalités du pays élaborent et adoptent des liens de conduite et des programmes visant la création de collectivités écologiques. Ce rapport décrit brièvement le contexte dans lequel ces changements prennent place et fait état de la faveur qu'obtient cette méthode de planification et de gestion des municipalités. De plus, des exemples d'initiatives menées au Canada viennent illustrer la situation et la diversité des travaux en cours en matière de développement durable.

Ce document est destiné aux organismes coopérateurs. Il a pour but de leur fournir des directives et des normes pour le choix, l'installation, l'exploitation et l'entretien d'une station climatologique automatisée et d'assurer que les données recueillies soient compatibles avec les données du réseau climatologique du Service de l'environnement at-

La section sur les Descriptions et les Définitions définit les termes utilisés dans ce document et couvre des sujets comme la classification des stations, les programmes d'observation, les éléments climatologiques, et d'autres concepts pertinents. La section traitant des Exigences et des normes fournit des normes sur l'emplacement, la documentation du site, la précision des données et la programmation des enregistreurs de données. La section intitulée Pratique suggérée fournit des recommandations quant aux exigences relatives au système et à son support, des directives sur l'installation, l'exploitation et l'entretien d'un site, des procédures d'assurance de la qualité des données et de l'information sur le format et les supports d'enregistrement.

Pressure relief valves (PRVs) are a critical part of a pressure vessel thermal protection system. Various problems could contribute to a catastrophic failure of the valve at a moment when it is needed. This report describes a test facility designed to study PRVs under realistic blowdown conditions, including single phase vapour or liquid flow and two-phase flow. The facility currently uses steam and water as the test fluid up to a pressure of 300 pounds per square inch; future upgrades could include air/water for higher pressures. The facility can be used to study the dynamic performance of PRVs under various blowdown modes, including slow pressure build-up, fast pressure build-up, valve cycling, and continuous flow. The report includes results of tests performed on relief valves of the type that would normally be installed on propane tanks. Appendices include information on flow capacity theory, valve lift/discharge area relationships, valve noise control, and thermal effects of PRV operation.

The Cabot Head promontory is the northernmost salient protruding into Georgian Bay along the east side of the Bruce Peninsula in Ontario. This report focuses on the Cabot Head Provincial Nature Reserve and Area of Natural and Scientific Interest (ANSI), beginning with a review of the area's regional context. This includes description of the peninsula's bedrock and surficial geology, glacial history, and postulated subglacial meltwater flood events that may have shaped peninsular landforms. It then reviews the geology and geomorphology of the nature reserve and ANSI, including the local stratigraphy and glacial landforms, shoreline processes, karst processes and features, and the significant geological features found in the study area. It concludes with recommendations in support of informed management of the significant natural features of the nature reserve and ANSI.

Ecological integration of zebra mussels in the Great Lakes : trophic interactions and impacts on contaminant dynamics : final report

Zebra mussels, one of the most recent non-indigenous species to invade the Great Lakes, achieves extraordinary population densities in the lower lakes. They draw in water and filter a broad range of suspended particles, and have the potential to alter contaminant cycling in invaded lakes. They are also a conduit for contaminants and energy to higher trophic levels by serving as prey for fish and waterfowl. This study assesses the suitability of the zebra mussel as an organic contaminant biomonitor in the lower Great Lakes and also addresses its importance to waterfowl diets and body burdens of organocontaminants. It presents results of elimination rate determinations for polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB) congeners and contaminant levels in mussels from various sites in Lake Erie and Lake St. Clair; results of experiments to determine the contribution of food to zebra mussel PCB accumulation; and statistical analyses of contaminant data for six species of ducks, examining differences in contaminant levels between those that consumed zebra mussels and those that did not.

Economic policy and the transition to democracy, the Latin American experience

In the 1980s, a large number of Latin American countries reverted from military dictatorships to civilian democracies. This book attempts to illuminate the special problems that countries face when democracy is restored after a considerable lapse of time, with a central focus on the problems faced by the new governments in both the formulation and implementation of economic policy. An introductory chapter synthesises Latin American experiences with economic policy after the transition to democracy, including stabilisation programs, economic reforms, and interactions between politics and economics during the transition. This is followed by six case studies which analyse the difficulties encountered and performance of the new democratic government in Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay.

The Effect of monitor type and display orientation on the classification of targets on a simulated dynamic passive sonar display

The primary medium for displaying sonar data is the cathode ray tube (CRT). To enable the sonar operator to handle typically large quantities of data, signal visibility is critical. To ensure good CRT display visibility it is necessary to understand the impact of display characteristics on the detectability of signals on a display. This study examined the effect on target classification of two display characteristics: type of monitor (multichrome or monochrome) and the orientation of signals relative to the CRT raster. The benefit of having signal lines fall along CRT scan lines was assessed in tests in which subjects had to classify targets presented in random order over time on a simulated frequency-time-intensity display.

The primary medium for displaying sonar data is the cathode ray tube (CRT). To enable the sonar operator to handle typically large quantities of data, signal visibility is critical. To ensure good CRT display visibility it is necessary to understand the impact of display characteristics on the detectability of signals on a display. This study examined two factors believed to influence the detection of signal lines on a frequency-time-intensity (FTI) display: the use of multichrome versus monochrome monitors and the orientation of the signals relative to the CRT raster orientation. Currently, frequency in an FTI display is plotted on the x axis and time on the y axis to be consistent with paper FTI displays, making signals perpendicular to the CRT scan lines. Experiments examined detection performance using both monochrome and multichrome monitors, using the standard FTI format and a format where the y axis was parallel to the scan lines. CA ND PS SC

Summarises results of a study designed to determine whether planting faults negatively affect the survival and early growth of bareroot and container black spruce. The study was conducted in Pictou County, Nova Scotia, on a site clear-cut in 1986-7 and planted in May 1989. The trial consisted of three replications (blocks), 17 treatments, and 30 seedlings per treatment within each block. Five years after planting, trees were assessed for survival and measured for total height and leader growth. Results relate planting faults to survival, height growth, production of multiple stems, biomass production, stem deformities, and general rootform and distribution. AP FO PR SC

Describes the effects of flow regulation on the freeze-up processes of part of the Peace River downstream of the Bennett Dam, which has regulated the river flow since 1972. Ice modelling and a review of ice observations and other field data were used to characterise the extent of flow regulation and its effects on ice in the river channel. Explicit equations and algorithms are presented that quantify the processes by which an ice cover forms on large regulated and non-regulated rivers. Work previously undertaken on the Peace River is also described to provide a framework for the calibration of these algorithms for the river in both its regulated and non-regulated condition. A procedure was developed for forecasting freeze-up on a non-regulated river and a stability relationship was derived that uses both air temperature and discharge to determine whether a juxtaposed or consolidated ice cover will form. In addition, the hydraulic characteristics of the Peace River were evaluated for six reaches using the existing data base. AL CA ND NR PS SC

Environmental assessment guidelines for residential development in the city of Winnipeg

MICROLOG 96-05702 (2 fiche)

Many recent urban residential developments are taking place on lands previously used for non-residential uses, including industrial and other uses which may have contaminated the land. Some Canadian cities have imposed requirements for environmental site assessments as part of the municipal approval process for residential development. There are no such requirements, however, in Winnipeg. This report begins with an overview of the development of environmental legislation and enforcement practices and reviews various aspects of environmental site assessments, including the case in favour of a municipal role in such assessments. The position of the Canadian Home Builders' Association on issues related to contaminated lands is also reviewed. The report then reviews site assessment practices in Winnipeg and other Canadian cities and makes appropriate recommendations. The appendix contains guidelines for environmental auditing and a standard for environmental site assessment.

This report reviews and compares the federal, provincial and territorial EA frameworks and processes. Identifies the attributes of effectiveness for 'new generation' Canadian systems, and relates these to trends and issues of contemporary practice. The analysis has been undertaken as a joint initiative of Canada's EA administrators and contribution to the ongoing work of the international study of EA effectiveness. As such, the report supplements the country status report prepared by Canada as part of the effectiveness study and provides a basis for further research and development of the enabling conditions of sound practice.

Environmental improvement through urban energy management, Canadian overview

Torrie, Smith & Associates. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, International Relations Division, 1994. viii, 89 p. : Ill., Bibl. French ed. (Amélioration de l'environnement par la gestion...) : 96-05714/2.
MICROLOG 96-05715 (2 fiche)

Reviews the rationale for and the current practice of urban energy management in Canada, with a special focus on the environmental benefits. Includes description of a survey of urban energy management for environmental improvement in Canada, with an emphasis on best practice and illustrations of innovative programs. Observations are made with regard to the reasons Canadian municipalities are adopting urban energy management programs, the barriers being encountered, and the common elements essential to success. The survey of current activities reviews urban energy management practices at three levels: in-house energy management, consisting of efforts to reduce fuel and electricity use in the municipality's own operations; extension of energy management to the community at large; and the integration of urban energy management into strategies for environmentally sustainable community development. Appendices contain background material on the supply and demand of fuels and electricity in Canada and the related environmental impacts, with particular reference to urban energy and environment issues.

Cette étude sur le terrain visait à déterminer s'il existe une corrélation entre l'étanchéité à l'air me-surée et la ventilation, d'une part, et la qualité de l'air intérieur, d'autre part, ainsi qu'à examiner les principaux facteurs qui déterminent les taux d'humidité intérieure en automne et en hiver. Ces renseignements sont nécessaires pour qu'il soit possible de déterminer s'il existe des niveaux d'étanchéité à l'air des immeubles qui se caractérisent par une absence de problème de qualité de l'air intérieur et d'humidité excessive, l'hypothèse étant que les immeubles se situant dans la partie supérieure de la gamme peuvent être rendus étanches en toute sécurité. Ce rapport présente les résultats d'essais qui avaient pour but de mesurer le taux d'émission des polluants de divers polluants de l'air intérieur dans trente maisons du Québec et compare les chiffres obtenus à des données comparables concernant des maisons situées en Ontario. Ces renseignements permettent d'évaluer la ventilation minimale requise pour maintenir le niveau des divers polluants à des taux acceptables.

This study examined the potential for establishing touring corridors and loops within Manitoba to attract the international traveller. The study follows a classic marketing plan approach, with primary research conducted throughout the province and through on-site tourism visits to locations in the United States, Japan, and Europe, as well as direct contact with the travel trade and review of relevant secondary data. Twelve corridors or loops were identified and matched to complementary touring products that were identified along the selected corridors and loops. The study also identifies target market segments for such products as historic sites, cities, cultural groups, local festivals, and nature and outdoor recreation attractions. Action plans are presented for encouraging tourism and developing packages for various product/market matches directed at different countries. Opportunities for additional product development such as ecotourism are also noted.

Ce rapport s'articule autour du thème de la variabilité et du changement climatiques. Il développe les analyses antérieures de la température en examinant les profils saisonniers et quotidiens des variations de température à long terme. Il montre que les hausses les plus marquées se sont produites en hiver et au printemps et de nuit. Les données sur les glaces de lac y sont également analysées, car elles confirment la tendance générale des températures. L'analyse révèle qu'il y a eu un raccourcissement moyen de la saison des glaces hivernales (d'environ une semaine), principalement à cause de l'avance du dégel printanier. Le rapport aborde également les tendances des précipitations et de la nébulosité au Canada, deux autres éléments climatiques qui contribuent à expliquer le changement climatique mondial.

Le Comité utilise un processus comportant des initiatives, à court, moyen et long termes, entièrement axées sur l'organisation sociale. La première partie du rapport décrit l'ensemble et le quartier de Stamp's Place. La deuxième partie du rapport explique en détail la structure du Comité, ses principes et la façon de déterminer les objectifs à court, moyen et long termes. On y souligne aussi les défis que le Comité a dû surmonter : certains, communs à tous les processus de développement communautaire, d'autres, particuliers aux ensembles de logement public. ### Fair Trading Act : discussion paper

Edmonton : Alberta Municipal Affairs, Housing & Consumer Affairs, 1996. 15 p. MICROLOG 96-05808 (1 fiche)

In Alberta, the current legislation affecting business and consumers is spread over seven Acts, each dealing with a particular part of the marketplace. The result is a patchwork of legislation that businesses find inconsistent and that does not necessarily take into account new marketing techniques developed over the past few decades. Alberta Housing & Consumer Affairs is proposing to develop a new Fair Trading Act that would deal comprehensively with all aspects of today's marketplace. The new Act would replace seven existing statutes and would have the objective of encouraging a fair marketplace by protecting businesses and consumers from unfair practices. This paper outlines issues the new Act is trying to resolve and includes space for receiving comments from the public. These issues include privacy, consumer restitution, debt collection, licensing, telemarketing, credit, unsolicited goods, liabilities, penalties and enforcement, and home improvement problems. #### Flooding protection of ro-ro ferries, phase 1 : extension, vol. I

Prepared for: Transportation Development Centre, Policy and Coordination, Transport Canada ; by: Joseph H. Rousseau. Vancouver, BC : Polar Design Associates Ltd., 1995. xiii, 54 p. : ill., Bibl.

Presents results of tests of the damage stability of roll-on roll-off (ro-ro) passenger ferries using a 1:20 scale model. The test program included systematic variation of the model's centre of gravity within the boundaries of International Maritime Organisation stability criteria. Three different model configurations were studied: fully enclosed superstructure, a superstructure open at the stern, and a fully open deck with bulwarks at the side. Freeing port areas were varied from zero to 30% of the per-side length. Data were examined to show the effect of freeing port area, flaps on the freeing ports, presence or absence of a centreline casing, residual freeboard after damage, and amount of water on deck. The results were used to analyse the impact and applicability of a proposed regulation for ro-ro vessels.

Details results of 17 focus group meetings held across Canada with participants that included seniors and people with disabilities. The meetings were held to solicit consumer input on accessible and adaptable housing features in two categories: basic features, which should be designed and built into all new homes to provide a reasonable amount of accessibility at a reasonable incremental cost; and custom features designed to meet special needs. Features of widespread support include those that contribute to wheelchair access, safety, ease of use, or future adaptability. Participant comments are presented in chapters covering such topics as bathrooms, kitchens, alarm systems, entry areas, stairs and elevators, windows, bedrooms, outdoor areas, parking, heating/cooling systems, laundry rooms, exits, recreational facilities, and garbage disposal. The appendix includes a demographic profile of focus group participants and selected material from a focus group survey questionnaire.

La Fondation ontarienne pour la recherche en cancérologie et le traitement du cancer (FORCTC) dispense des services de traitement et de soutien aux patients par le biais de huit centres régionaux de cancérologie à Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Thunder Bay, Toronto, Sudbury et Windsor. Ces centres régionaux, ainsi que l'Hôpital Princess Margaret, de Toronto, dispensent tous les traitements de radiothérapie et presque tous les traitements de chimiothérapie en Ontario. Dans le cadre de son mandat, la FORCTC gère aussi des programmes de recherche, de dépistage précoce, de prévention et d'éducation sur le cancer. Ce rapport annuel présente huit personnes en vedette, chacune a mis au service d'autrui son expérience personnelle du cancer. Un rapport des activités pour chaque centre régional est donnée. Aboriginal people in Canada are increasingly expressing a desire for forestry education opportunities, yet few post-secondary institutions have yet responded to this need. It is anticipated that Aboriginal groups will frequently enter into partnership arrangements with colleges and universities for delivery of forestry education to Aboriginal students, and for delivery of Aboriginal forestry concepts to all students. This report presents a framework for such a partnership, from early explorations through program design and delivery to ongoing long-term relationships. The framework consists of a goal, a set of principles, and guidance on partnership development. The framework has been developed through consultations with Aboriginal people in northern Ontario, but is offered for use anywhere in Canada.

This paper begins by outlining some of the more important multilateral trade initiatives now under way, including the push to complete the Uruguay Round's unfinished business, World Trade Organization negotiations, and a recent decision to develop a Multilateral Agreement on Investment. It also reviews two agreements that represent efforts to deepen formal economic integration: the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and MERCOSUR (comprising Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, and Uruguay). The final sections focus in greater detail on efforts in the western hemisphere to expand the scope of economic interdependence through free trade negotiations. They include a Canadian perspective on the rationale underpinning Chile's hoped-for accession to NAFTA, with emphasis on Chile as a test case for NAFTA to re-invent itself, and a look forward to the next steps that should be taken. Four options are explored involving NAFTA, MERCOSUR, and their individual countries.

A team of Alberta legislators held consultations with Albertans about the ways in which business and schools could work together to provide the best possible education for youth. These consultations resulted in a report with recommendations. On the basis of that report and the comments received from Albertans, Alberta Education presents in this document a framework setting out seven projects to enhance business involvement in education. For each project, an action plan is outlined, involving both immediate steps and long-term actions toward the year 2000. The projects are intended to: create community structures; promote workplace learning; encourage apprenticeships; enhance lifelong career education; review school programs and standards; develop credentials for a global economy; and provide legislative and policy support.

From the ground up : designing a new, child-centred child welfare system for British Columbia

By Keith R. Hamilton. Victoria : Gove Inquiry Into Child Protection, 1995. 91 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-05744 (2 fiche)

The first part of this paper provides a historical review of the governance of child welfare in British Columbia, from the provision of welfare services by private charities to the reorganisation of the Ministry of Social Services in 1988. The second part reviews attempts at interministerial co-ordination of child welfare services, including the Ombudsman's recommendation of integration, the Child and Youth Secretariat, local and regional child and youth committees, the 1993 recommendations regarding changes to the Secretariat model, and a subsequent restructuring of the Secretariat by Cabinet. Previous reports from British Columbia and other jurisdictions regarding governance of child welfare are also reviewed in part 3. The final part presents a proposal for designing a new child-centred child welfare system for the province, including its fundamental principles, essential elements, goals, service delivery, quality assurance, and administrative structure.

By David Cruickshank. Victoria : Gove Inquiry Into Child Protection, 1995. 15 p.

This paper begins with a brief history of child welfare institutions and the evolution of fundamental child welfare goals and legislation in Canada. The transition from a rescue oriented child welfare system to one offering a broad continuum of services is noted, as well as the special vision and principles associated with Aboriginal child welfare services. Three alternative approaches to child welfare policy are then summarised: residual, institutional, and social development centred. Fundamental goals of a child welfare delivery system are proposed and the issue of conflict between the goals of child protection and family support or reunification is discussed. The paper ends with a section discussing whether statistical analysis can show that particular goals are being achieved.

This atlas supplements previous cancer mortality maps for Ontario for 1976-85 by employing cancer incidence data for a more recent period. The data presented show regional distribution of cancer incidence by census division (county), sex, and cancer type for 1980-91. The cancer data comes from the Ontario Cancer Registry, which includes all diagnoses of cancer reported in Ontario residents since 1964. The atlas begins with introductory sections on data quality and mapping methods used, and an overview of the province, its people and their health status, and some lifestyle factors that may affect cancer risk. It then presents maps of cancer incidence by cancer type, coded according to the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision. Comments accompanying each map are given regarding data quality, risk factors, prevention and early detection, and Ontario geographic patterns.

This literature review focuses on problematic areas that youth are finding through their experiences with the child welfare system. Most of the literature reviewed was written by youth who have lived through the system. The review is organised according to the following themes: belonging, which examines the feelings of youth as they make the transition from their natural family to the care of the child welfare system; understanding, which examines issues facing youth living within the child welfare system; support, which discusses youth experiences with support from the system; and control, which considers such sub-themes as powerlessness, moving from place to place, information, and participation.

Greening Government : the whole picture, a report on federal council workshops

LURAGroup (Firm). Dartmouth, NS : Environment Canada, Atlantic Region, 1995. 145 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-05807 (2 fiche)

The federal Greening Government Initiative was developed to promote the integration of environmental concerns and practices into the daily operations of government. This report is from two workshops organised to bring together federal representatives from key departments and agencies to meet and discuss both the implications of the initiative on federal operations and mechanisms for furthering interdepartmental co-operation and collaboration. The workshops included presentations from officials of Environment Canada, the Treasury Board, and the Auditor General's office on amendments to the Auditor General Act and related priorities; presentations describing progress made in implementing Greening Government activities throughout Atlantic Canada; and discussions on the implications of the amendments, opportunities for greening of government operations, and next steps for establishing co-operative mechanisms for furthering collaboration in the Atlantic region.

Ce document décrit les caractéristiques d'accessibilité et d'adaptation les plus importantes pour les participants. Les commentaires des participants appuient, et parfois contredisent, l'opinion répandue chez les concepteurs de logements accessibles. Les caractéristiques les plus généralement préconisées par les participants étaient celles qui facilitaient l'accès des fauteuils roulants, la sécurité, l'emploi ou l'adaptation future. La plupart des participants reconnaissent que la facilité d'accès pour les fauteuils roulants peut profiter à tous à différentes étapes de la vie, surtout dans la salle de bains, la cuisine, la chambre à coucher et l'entrée. Nombre de caractéristiques concernant la sécurité, l'adaptation et l'usage quotidien tiennent compte des besoins des personnes atteintes d'un handicap sensoriel.

L'Inventaire national des rejets de polluants (INRP) est une initiative du gouvernement fédéral destinée à rassembler et à mettre à la disposition du public des données complètes sur le rejet de certaines substances dans l'atmosphère, l'eau et le sol, et le transfert dans les déchets. Il fournit des renseignements sur les rejets de polluants provenant de toutes les sphères d'activité au Canada, notamment des secteurs industriel, commercial et gouvernemental. En vertu de la Loi canadienne sur la protection de l'environnement, les propriétaires ou les exploitants d'installations qui, dans certaines conditions, fabriquent, traitent ou utilisent d'une autre manière une ou plusieurs des substances répertoriées, sont tenus de produire une déclaration à l'INRP. Le présent document permettra aux propriétaires ou aux exploitants d'installations d'examiner les critères de déclaration à l'INRP et de déterminer s'ils sont tenus de produire une telle déclaration pour l'année en cours. Il contient des directives sur la façon de remplir le formulaire et de présenter le rapport prescrit à Environnement Canada.

The National Pollutant Release Inventory (NPRI) is a federal government initiative designed to collect and make available to the public, on a yearly basis, comprehensive national data on releases to air, water and land and transfers in waste of specified substances. The inventory provides information from all Canadian sectors: industrial, government, commercial and others. Under the authority of the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, owners or operators of facilities that manufacture, process or otherwise use one or more of the specified substances under prescribed conditions are required to report to the NPRI. This document enables facility owners or operators to review the NPRI reporting criteria and determine if they are required to report the NPRI for the current year. It also provides guidance for completing the reporting form and filing a report with Environment Canada.

The intent of this guide is to provide an overview of the key steps in planning a child care service in British Columbia. The ten steps detailed in the guide will help in asking informed questions, recognising appropriate information, and meeting the people who can help in making wise decisions. The steps include: assessing community needs and child care options; licensing; getting help from support groups; local government requirements; preparing operational and financial plans; deciding to construct or renovate the child care facility; designing a child care facility; confirming of funding; obtaining development approvals; and preparing to open the facility. Names, addresses, and phone/fax numbers of useful contacts are mentioned throughout. A subject index is also included. The appendix contains a quick reference guide from the Community Care Facilities Branch, Child Care Centres Licensing.

The purpose of this guide is to provide information about native plants found in Alberta, the communities in which they are found, and current knowledge about revegetation methods. The introduction contains background information on the advantages of using native plants for revegetation, different approaches to revegetation, minimising impacts of activities and using alternative revegetation techniques on sensitive sites, site preparation, seeding, follow-up care, watercourse crossings, restoration, revegetation assessment, and producing native seeds and plants. The main section lists species (grasses, forbs, shrubs, trees, mosses, lichens) by moisture regime for each ecological sub-region of the province. The third section contains a table giving characteristics of native plant species, including growth form, mode of reproduction, seed information, forage value, habitat, distribution, natural ecoregion, and seed/plant availability. The appendix includes a glossary and a directory of native seed/plant suppliers.

The controversy to which hate propaganda gives rise appears to be more virulent and far-reaching than the volume and availability alone of this material would seem to justify. Although material inciting hatred and advocating racial superiority, has probably always existed, the last 30 years have witnessed a widespread debate as to what, if anything, to do about it. This debate places in the most acute conflict possible generally accepted Canadian multicultural and egalitarian social values and the libertarian value of freedom of expression.

Hawaii's Healthy Start Program is considered a leader in the prevention of child abuse and neglect in the United States. This document describes this program, which uses a proactive approach to identify families at risk at the time of birth. The Program has developed four levels of service to accommodate the various needs of families, with higher degrees of intervention for higher risk families. Services are contracted out and include regular visits by paraprofessional home visitors. The document includes a financial evaluation of the program, a demographic profile of Program clients, and information on the child protection success rate. The document then analyses the Hawaii program as it relates to child protection issues in British Columbia, with reference to issues raised at the Gove Inquiry. Similarities and differences between Hawaii and British Columbia are noted, financial implications of implementing a similar program in the province are reviewed, and limitations and questions concerning Healthy Start are raised.

Describes a project to test a high intensity ultraviolet light source, the Fusion Microwave VBL 3400, for its potential to produce a desirable quality and intensity of lethal ultraviolet radiation for control of zebra mussel larvae infestation. Project phases include procurement of the light source and appropriate bulb; static light penetration tests through varying water depths as well as flow-through zebra mussel mortality determinations; additional flow-through tests to determine the zebra mussel control capabilities of the microwave lamp and medium pressure bulb under varying depth and flow conditions; and determination of the limits of the VBL 3400 in terms of its capability to treat higher flow rates for removal of water-borne veligers and post veligers. In this phase, water flows ranging from 40 to 120 litres per minute through the ultraviolet exposure chamber at 25 centimetre depth were tested for effectiveness in achieving mussel larva mortality.

Presents results of tests carried out in a cold laboratory with two prototypes of an improved Clean Wing Detection System (CWDS) developed by Instrumar. The objectives of the tests were to provide data to establish how well the flat plate test performs as a defensible measurement representing fluid holdover time on an airfoil; to provide data for the development by Instrumar of an algorithm applicable to the CWDS sensor to give an advance warning of fluid failure; and to investigate responses of a single channel CWDS device under holdover and aerodynamic elimination tests. The tests evaluated CWDS performance under various icing conditions using flat plate and airfoil set-ups, using 13 different de-icing fluid samples. Thickness of the fluid layer covering the CWDS sensors in a range comparable to treatment of aircraft on the ground. During the tests, different fluid failure times were measured according to the sensor mounting and type of ice formed. All failure times were visually monitored to correlate visual observations of sensor icing and the recorded signals.

Housing the new family : reinventing housing for families

In recent decades, the Canadian family has been marked by changes in structure and in role definition, and the traditional family now accounts for only a minority. Current housing is not necessarily family-friendly and the changing needs of young families with children are generally not taken into account at either the level of housing design or at the level of community planning. This report reviews literature on family housing, with reference to such housing characteristics as availability of child care services and transportation, spatial flexibility, and safety. It then presents a number of case studies of successful family housing projects in Canada and abroad, illustrating ways that family-oriented amenities and services can be integrated into the residential environment. The report then examines the appeal of these new housing ideas via a survey of 450 households of young families in Canada's three largest metropolitan areas.

Understanding the effects of nutrients on the aquatic environment will be critical for managing industrial and municipal effluent discharges in northern Alberta rivers. One objective of this study was to identify spatial patterns of nutrient limitation in the Wapiti-Smoky and Athabasca river systems, which receive a diversity of effluent discharges including municipal sewage, agricultural runoff, and effluent from oil sands and pulp mills. Investigators conducted two experiments to accomplish this goal: identification of the interactive effects of both nutrient enrichment and grazing by aquatic insects (herbivory) on algal biomass, using nutrient diffusing substrata (NDS) downstream of the Hinton combined effluent; and using NDS to quantify large-scale patterns in algal biomass and nutrient limitation upstream and downstream of the major effluent and tributary input sources along the three rivers. NDS placed at 33 sites aided in the identification of river reaches having no nutrient limitation and those having some form of nutrient limitation.

The Canada Health and Social Transfer (CHST) amalgamates the former federal transfers to the provinces under Established Programs Financing and the Canada Assistance Plan. Unfortunately, the method of determining the initial CHST allocations continued the previous programs' bias against Ontario, Alberta, and British Columbia. This paper details the sources of these inequalities and shows how they will change over the next five years, noting the effect of recent changes to the previous programs and of the decision to ignore population changes during the first year of the CHST. Total and per capita cash transfers for fiscal years 1996/97 and 2002/03 are presented, as well as cash transfers projected under alternative growth scenarios. The paper concludes by proposing an equal per-capita cash transfer, which would moderate an important source of friction in federal-provincial relations.

Jack pine comprises only 15% of the total wood volume of northern Ontario forests but is considered second only to black spruce in terms of commercial value. The most serious pest infesting jack pine is the jack pine budworm (Choristoneura pinus pinus), which can completely defoliate the upper crowns of trees in areas of severe infestation. This paper describes damage to jack pine stands caused by the budworm and presents impact estimators (related to growth loss, mortality, and dead-top damage) as a useful tool for pest managers.

Industrialization of narrow-front rowhousing using wall panel systems

By Avi Friedman and Vince Cammalleri. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation ; Québec : Société d'habitation du Québec, 1994. iv, 105 p. : ill., Bibl. French ed. (Construction industrialisée des maisons...) : 96-05720/2. On cover: Industrialization of the Grow Home.
MICROLOG 96-05713 (2 fiche)

This study examines how the Grow Home concept can be adapted to an industrialised method of production using prefabricated panel systems, and to determine the implications of this adaptation in terms of quality, economy, and technical performance. A survey of 109 manufacturers led to nine types of panel systems to be selected for evaluation using a method based on 34 variables to assess the adequacy and suitability of the options available for a given context. Results indicated the level of quality achieved by prefabricated panels compared to conventional construction, as well as some drawbacks to the use of prefabricated panels. A framework for Grow Home industrialisation was developed by adapting the unit's design to provide sufficient flexibility for the builder and economies of scale for the manufacturer. A wide range of layout options was generated using a small number of simple, standard components. The potential for prefabricated systems to reduce construction costs was addressed by examining the costs of several prefabricated components, including exterior and dividing walls, floors, and partitions.

Information management plan, 1995-96

Canada. Environment Canada. Systems & Informatics Directorate. Ottawa : The Directorate, 1995. 37 p. : ill.
MICROLOG 96-05804 (1 fiche)

An integrated environmental monitoring approach requires data and information systems that permit interdisciplinary models that couple elements from formerly disparate sciences such as ecology and meteorology, into an ecosystems approach. This involves data management, refinements in computing especially involving storage, networking, distributed file systems, extensive distributed database management, and visualization tools. This document provides an overview of Environment Canada and its information management organisation. It discusses strategic business planning and information management planning for the Dept. and gives a blueprint for renewing government services. Next, it details the information management direction: vision, objectives, policy framework, holdings and data management, shared applications, local area and wide area networks (LANs, and WAN), information technology architectures, and security. Finally, it covers supporting initiatives.

This document has been developed to provide guidance on assessing sediment contamination, and where warranted, on devising a management strategy for dealing with the contamination. The document is intended to guide the appropriate stakeholders in the technical aspects of sediment assessment and remediation, thereby facilitating public participation in the process. The first section offers an overview of relevant legislation (federal, Ontario, and municipal) governing remediation projects. Section two concerns data gathering, including levels of assessment, devising a sampling strategy, and types of studies to be conducted. The third section covers data evaluation. Section four addresses issues associated with sediment remediation, including the factors involved in establishing cleanup goals. Section five discusses various remediation options, from natural remediation to removal and treatment. The final two sections discuss implementation and monitoring of the remediation plan.

This report is intended to stimulate further exploration and study of Ontario kimberlite resources and ultimately lead to the identification of commercial grade diamond deposits. It includes a review of the general geology of kimberlites, the dominant mantle xenolith types found in kimberlites, and kimberlite indicator minerals. The main section describes the kimberlite occurrences and kimberlite pipes of the Lake Timiskaming Structural Zone, including their regional and local settings, geophysical expression, geochronology, xenoliths, indicator minerals, and petrology. Recommendations for future studies and exploration conclude the report. Appendices include tables of analytical data, a summary of kimberlite pipe xenolith palaeontology, and petrographic descriptions of kimberlite samples studied.

Cette étude se divise en cinq chapitres. Le chapitre 1 comprend l'introduction, des définitions et une description des méthodes de recherche. Le chapitre 2 fait la synthèse des principales conclusions dégagées des ouvrages recensés et les regroupe en trois grandes rubriques : les études axées sur la collectivité, les études menées auprès des malades mentaux et les études réalisées en milieu carcéral.

Les principales associations statistiques signalées dans les ouvrages y sont décrites. Le chapitre 3 renferme une analyse critique des données associant la maladie mentale à la violence, l'objectif étant de déterminer si les associations statistiques relevées dans les études répondent aux critères épidémiologiques de causalité. Le lecteur trouvera également une liste des ouvrages cités dans le chapitre 3. Le rapport comprend aussi deux annexes : l'appendice A, qui contient une bibliographie annotée des articles analysés, et l'appendice B, qui comprend un petit glossaire des principaux termes techniques utilisés. Scleroderma canker, caused by the fungus Gremmeniella abietina, has been regarded as a major pest of pine for over 30 years. Both monitoring and treatment of scleroderma are labour-intensive and costly, but the disease can cause significant economic losses if not controlled. This paper describes an economic model that can be applied to the scleroderma problem in red pine plantations. The model permits comparison of net present values of alternative treatment and harvest regimes. Forest managers can use the model to assist in determining optimal harvest and treatment regimes (investment levels) for scleroderma control. Results are presented for a fixed treatment base scenario and an optimal treatment threshold scenario. Management implications of model decisions are also discussed. CA CO FO ND ON PR PS SC

Mandatory duty to report

Lisa Martz ; with the assistance of Brock Enderston. Victoria : Gove Inquiry into Child Protection, 1995. 56 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-05747 (1 fiche)

Receipt of reports from citizens and professionals who believe that a child has been abused or neglected is a crucial first step in the protection of children. The legal mechanism governing the reporting of such complaints is a major feature of the child welfare system. Child protection statutes in Canada (except for Yukon) make it mandatory to report children suspected of being abused. This paper begins with a history of the legislated mandatory duty in the United States and Canada, and a comparative analysis of duty under two British Columbia statutes: the Family & Child Service Act and the subsequent Child, Family & Community Service Act. It then presents a comparative analysis of reporting legislation in other Canadian jurisdictions and evaluates the effectiveness of the mandatory duty, with reference to a survey of professional training programs and organisations. This evaluation examined the degree of awareness of the duty to report, the factors affecting compliance with this duty by professionals, and enforcement of the reporting requirement. The paper concludes with recommendations concerning the duty to report. BC CI JU PR SA SS

Documents the results of a study conducted to assess the viability of establishing a float glass manufacturing plant in Manitoba. Presents realistic economic, technical, and marketing analyses and information based on an extensive collection of data derived from pertinent glass industry, consumer, service, and government sources. Financial analysis of the plant is according to a detailed economic model that evaluates the financial viability of the proposed plant in terms of both profitability and rentability. The market analysis includes an examination of the forecast demand for float glass in North America and the capacity of the industry to supply that demand. The technical analysis takes into account the availability of raw materials, labour, plant site locations, utility services, construction materials, and plant equipment, the possible environmental effects of a plant, and the degree of government support for the glass industry. Describes a study of Manitoba's tourism market for persons with disabilities. After an introductory section, the second section discusses the nature of physical disability and the implications of disability for tourism, and assesses the market for tourism in Canada and Manitoba for persons with disabilities. The third section reviews Manitoba's tourism product as it relates to the interests and needs of persons with disabilities. Included in the discussion of product are the results of surveys, site visits, and consumer evaluations of attractions, commercial lodging, transportation systems, and information sources. Section 4 presents an assessment of Manitoba as a destination and of Manitoba's tourism industry as a delivery system in terms of their international competitiveness in attracting and accommodating tourists who have physical disabilities. The final section presents a framework for developing a marketing strategy designed to attract and serve persons with disabilities, including specific recommendations and identification of key partners in implementing the strategy.

Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia. Halifax : The Commission, 1996. xvi, 59 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 96-05783 (1 fiche)

Changes in society and law since the passage of the Nova Scotia Matrimonial Property Act in 1980 suggest that reform is needed to ensure that the law dealing with the economic consequences of ending marriage or marriage-like relationships in Nova Scotia better meets current needs. This discussion paper describes the current law and the problems with the present system of matrimonial property division, and is designed to encourage discussion and public participation in reform of the law. Some of the important changes considered in drafting the paper include the increasing prevalence of divorce and of second and third family units, the social acceptance of cohabitation as a family form, increasing numbers of children born outside marriage, and increasing recognition of same-sex cohabitation. Suggestions are offered for reform in such areas as: division of pensions; definition of family assets; values to be reflected in a new Family Law Act; the kinds of relationships to be governed by the new Act; rights in relation to the family residence; and rights of surviving spouses on death.

Presents a critical review of the literature on the relationship between mental illness and violence. Studies dealing with a variety of mental disorders were assessed, including conditions such as schizophrenia, major depressive illnesses, substance abuse disorders, and personality disorders. The review focuses on articles published in the last 10-15 years, and the definition of violence was restricted to acts involving physical assaults or threats to others, including violent criminal acts. The main findings from the literature are summarised according to three themes: community-based studies, studies of the mentally ill population, and studies of incarcerated offenders. Key statistical associations reported in the literature are described, and evidence relating mental illness to violence is critically reviewed to determine whether the statistical associations meet the epidemiological criteria for causality. The appendices include an annotated bibliography of articles reviewed and a glossary of key technical terms.

Presents a combined hydrogeological and microbiological analysis of landfill leachate and soils in Essex County, Ontario, to study the vertical and horizontal flow rates of groundwater. Addresses two aspects of landfilling: the factors controlling the maintenance of a large and vigorous microbial population actively involved in biodegradation, and the retention of potentially pathogenic bacteria within the drainage borders of the landfill site. Possible movement of the predominant population of bacteria through leachate and groundwater was determined by a cluster analysis of the matrix of similarity coefficients of each strain compared to every other strain which was generated from their responses to 63 tests. The responses reflected the physiological profile of the organisms and provided, in part, the information needed to identify the bacterial isolates. The same database was also analysed for the principal components of the variance which were then interpreted ecologically.

New generation co-operatives for agricultural processing and value-added projects : a development guide

Regina : Saskatchewan Economic Development, 1996. 15 p. MICROLOG 96-05518 (1 fiche)

This guide is intended for groups interested in developing agricultural processing and value-added projects. It presents an organizational and ownership model for a new generation of producer-owned co-operatives similar to those emerging in the north-central United States. These co-operatives share many of the attributes of traditional co-operatives but differ in that they use tied contracts, have membership limited to those who purchase delivery rights, and have higher levels of equity investment by individual members. The first section of the guide provides groups with guidance on defining development issues, developing ideas to address these issues, and selecting an appropriate organizational model. The remainder is directed at groups choosing the new generation co-operative model, setting out a step-by-step process for developing an idea into a successful co-operative enterprise. A fictitious group of market gardeners is used to illustrate the development of a new generation co-operative.

Presents an analysis of the occurrence of asbestos-associated disease (mesothelioma and lung cancer) in the refinery and petrochemical sector in Lambton County, Ontario. The analysis had two aims: to assess the association between refinery/petrochemical employment and mesothelioma, and to examine the hypothesis that the increased risk of mesothelioma attributable to asbestos exposure among maintenance workers in that sector could also expose them to increased risk of lung cancer. Data for the study came from the Ontario Mortality Registry, and the specific methodology used was a case-control analysis. Formal statistical analysis was employed to quantify the association and provide estimates of statistical uncertainty. Comparison is also made to lung cancer risk in other industrial sectors in Lambton County.

Ontario fire regime model : its background, rationale, development and use

ISBN 0-7778-5028-1
MICROLOG 96-05431 (1 fiche)

Describes a study of forest fire dynamics at the landscape scale. Begins with background information on forest succession theory, the role of fires in forest dynamics, and fire regimes. It then reviews currently available forest fire models, comparing a number of model characteristics, the questions that the models addressed, and the assumptions used in the models. Reasons for developing a new model to overcome limitations of the reviewed models are discussed, and a new model called ON-FIRE (Ontario Fire Regime) is described. This model was developed for simulating fire regimes that result from the interaction between fire events and forest landscapes, as influenced by weather. Three main components of ON-FIRE are looped for each time step: forest growth, fire disturbance, and regeneration after the burn. ON-FIRE provides a framework for users to test different hypotheses of fire processes, and has many potential applications in such areas as forest policy and fire management.

The Ontario Forest Growth and Yield Program is an integral part of OMNR's Sustainable Forestry Initiative. In the spring of 1994, the Environmental Assessment Board released its report on the Class Environmental Assessment (Class E.A.) for Timber Management on Crown Lands in Ontario. A number of terms and conditions were derived from the Class E.A., each of which identified specific directions for crown lands being managed by the OMNR. The Program is represented by term and condition 100 of the Class E.A. which states: MNR shall design and implement a provincially coordinated program to obtain further information on forest growth and yield as influenced by site, forest structure, silvicultural treatments and natural events. This annual report is a breakdown of the provincial and regional components of the Program, providing information on budget, work completed to date and ongoing projects.

The Ontario Forest Growth and Yield Program is establishing and monitoring a network of over 4,000 permanent sample plots (PSPs) in managed and natural forests across the province. Program field staff use the plots to collect data on forest communities, lesser vegetation, site information, wildlife habitat, and timber growth and yield. The information will help to monitor the growth and dynamics of Ontario forests and to create computer models to predict future growth and dynamics. This manual is the official reference to the Program's field portion, and provides the minimum criteria for establishing and measuring PSPs. It uses detailed, step by step instructions to describe how to set up PSPs and collect data. Sections of the manual cover selecting the PSP, establishing the PSP, assessing vegetation, sampling tree height, assessing soils, and completing the various types of forms used in the Program. #### An Overview and analysis of First Nations child and family services in B.C.

By Elaine I. Herbert ; with the assistance of Kelly McDonald. Victoria : Gove Inquiry Into Child Protection, 1995. 246 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 96-05757 (3 fiche)

This report analyses of how First Nations child and family services are being delivered under the current family and child legislation. It examines how child welfare for First Nations became a distorted act of helping, and why First Nations child welfare programs are being challenged to re-create ways of helping that eliminate relationships of domination. The analysis is based on research at seven on-reserve First Nation child and family agencies which have agreements with the British Columbia Ministry of Social Services, and three child and family support services to First Nations in the Lower Mainland. The report begins with an overview of First Nations demographics and a review of the literature, focusing on British Columbia experience. It then reviews the legislation and administrative structures of child welfare as they pertain to First Nations and presents research results under two major themes: framing a model of First Nations child welfare, and the role of politics in the development of First Nations child welfare. Appendices include copies of various agreements between government and First Nations on provision of child welfare services. BC CI NP PA PR SA SS

To address the absence of a dedicated program related to the communication processes (how information was being received, acted upon, assessed by various target groups, and how the assessment was communicated back to the originators), the Centre created the CIME (Communication, Information, Media, Education) program. This publication presents the conceptual framework which led to the articulation of the CIME program and explains in detail how it was formulated, with references to conclusions of a regional meeting of African nongovernmental organisations. It also contains conclusions of another meeting organised to discuss various aspects of the program with Canadian experts in development communication and representatives of African nongovernmental organisations. La pornographie, c'est-à-dire toute représentation explicitement sexuelle, n'est pas un phénomène nouveau. Certaines personnes estiment que rien ne prouve de façon convaincante qu'il existe un lien de causalité entre la pornographie et la violence physique réelle, et que les autres effets possibles de la pornographie sont trop ténus ou négligeables pour que l'on attente à bon droit à la liberté d'expression garantie dans la Constitution. Ce bulletin tente de donner un aperçu de ce débat. CA DE JU SS

By James R. Robertson. Ottawa : Library of Parliament, Research Branch, 1995. 20 p. (Current issue review / Canada. Library of Parliament. Research Branch ; 84-3E) French ed. (La Pornographie) on the same fiche. Revised 1 August 1995. ISBN 0-660-16307-1 CCG-P no. YM32-1/84-3-1995-08E MICROLOG 96-05371 (1 fiche)

Sexually explicit material, or pornography, is not a new phenomenon. It has existed in some form in virtually every society throughout history. There are people who contend that there is no convincing evidence of any causal relationship between pornography and actual physical harm, and that any other effects are too attenuated or insignificant to justify the infringement of the constitutionally guaranteed freedom of expression. This publication attempts to give a survey of this debate. CA CI DE JU SS

By Walter R. Dyck. North York, ON : Defence & Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine, 1995. ii, 31 p. : Ill., Bibl. (DCIEM publication / Defence & Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine (Canada) ; 95-50) MICROLOG 96-05270 (1 fiche)

Describes the development of a portable, microcontroller-based vital signs monitor for monitoring blood pressure as required in field scenarios, integrated with the capability of monitoring heart rate and body temperature continuously on casualties, even within a casualty bag. The design has taken into account the need for future expansion and ease in reprogramming the software, to reflect changing priorities with respect to which signs are to be monitored. A helicopter used in casualty evacuation was identified as a worst-case condition for exposure to ambient noise, and results of field trials under such a condition are reported. CA LS ND PS SC

By James T. Horn. Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, 1996. 66 p. : Ill. ISBN 0-7778-5001-X MICROLOG 96-05589 (1 fiche)

Describes the redevelopment of a rigid polyolefin plastics recycling line and the design, construction, and operation of a new polyolefin film plant incorporating innovative technology to recover post-consumer, heavily soiled polyolefin films from the waste stream. Activities performed in these developments included the sourcing and testing of recyclable plastic waste materials; assessment of issues relating to collection, technology, and marketing; characterisation of material collected; investigation of resin separation technologies and alternatives; and improvement of existing recycling facility sorting, separation and processing techniques to dovetail with mixed rigid-bottle collections. Project economics are noted and some advice is given to prospective plastic recyclers. Appendices include a glossary, supply/demand price trends for plastic, and recycled materials purchase specifications. EV ON PR PS SC

Describes a project that examined natural canopy cover in 14 uncut stands in central Ontario, all having over 30% of their total basal area composed of white pine (Pinus strobus L.), with the goal of using the field data to produce guides for managing white pine stands. Investigators organised the trees into three species groups (white pine, other conifers, and hardwoods) and estimated percent canopy closure with an optical densiometer. Tree data were used to explore various relationships between tree growth and stand parameters associated with canopy cover. For each species group, a model that related crown area to diameter class was developed. Tables are included for use in estimating the appropriate residual basal area for a shelterwood cut so as to attain the desired percent canopy cover.

Le taux de pauvreté monte et descend constamment au Canada depuis 20 ans. Ce rapport présente une image statistique détaillée de la pauvreté au Canada et examine la pauvreté actuelle ainsi que les changements qu'on a pu noter au fil des ans en matière de pauvreté. Il indique aussi les tendances des revenus et des salaires moyens et se penche sur la répartition toujours inégale du revenu. On y trouve entre autres des statistiques sur la féminisation de la pauvreté, la pauvreté selon la province et l'âge, les liens entre le niveau de scolarité et la pauvreté, ainsi que sur la source de revenu principale.

Because of the periodicity, fecundity, and asynchronousity in white pine pollen- and seed-cone production, methods need to be developed to produce both pollen and seed cones, thereby shortening the breeding cycle in advanced generation breeding. This paper presents a study designed to examine previous research on gibberellin treatments for pollen-cone production. Experiments were conducted on a breeding orchard of eastern white pine in Ontario, using clones of 6- or 11-year-old grafts in each of three treatment periods (May-June, June-August, and August-September 1994). Data were collected the following year when pollen and seed cones had emerged from the bud scales. Results presented include comparison of pollen cone and seed cone production between treated and untreated control grafts, and the differences in production among the three treatment periods.

Describes a study conducted to determine whether pollen-cone production of black spruce can be promoted by growing grafts in a heated greenhouse and in an outdoor holding area, and spraying these grafts with different concentrations of naphthaleneacetic acid (NAA) during the periods of lateral shoot production. Begins with a review of research on the effects of NAA on pollen-cone production, then describes experimental materials and methods used. Results presented include effect of NAA spray concentrations on spruce mortality, effect of NAA spraying on pollen cone production, effectiveness of heat treatment combined with NAA spraying, and differences between indoor and outdoor treatments.

La propagande haineuse suscite une controverse d'une virulence et d'une ampleur qui ne semblent pas justifiées, si l'on ne tient compte que de son volume et de sa diffusion. La propagande incitant à la haine et préconisant l'inégalité raciale a probablement toujours existé; toutefois, les trente dernières années ont été le témoin d'un débat généralisé sur ce qu'il convient de faire à ce sujet, si tant est qu'on y puisse quelque chose. Cette discussion met plus directement que jamais en conflit les valeurs sociales généralement acceptées au Canada que sont le multiculturalisme et l'égalitarisme, d'une part, et la liberté d'expression, d'autre part.

Prostitution is at once a feminist and civil libertarian issue, and a law and order issue. It raises questions of morality and constitutional rights and freedoms. One of the few areas of consensual sexual activity that is still subject to legal control and the imposition of criminal sanctions, prostitution continues to engender vigorous debate. This document looks at the controversial subject of prostitution including development of the criminal law, & the Fraser Committee proposals.

La Charte canadienne des droits et libertés est entrée en vigueur le 17 avril 1982. Les garanties juridiques prévues par la Charte figurent aux articles 7 à 14, qui portent notamment sur le droit à la vie, à la liberté et à la sécurité, la protection contre les fouilles, les perquisitions et les saisies abusives, les droits des personnes mises en état d'arrestation ou de détention, les exigences relatives à certaines affaires criminelles et pénales, et la protection contre les traitements ou peines cruels et inusités. Les tribunaux ont maintenant rendu un grand nombre de décisions au sujet de ces articles. Dans ce document, nous nous attachons surtout aux jugements importants rendus par les cours d'appel provinciales et par la Cour suprême du Canada en ce qui a trait à la protection contre les fouilles, les perquisitions et les saisies abusives et aux droits des personnes mises en état d'arrestation. Le Comité devait se pencher sur les problèmes que posent la création et l'expansion, d'ici l'an 2000, d'un réseau national intégré de zones protégées représentatives des régions terrestres et marines du Canada. Les résultats de ses travaux, qui font l'objet de ce rapport, constituent un examen des outils et processus pouvant servir à l'élaboration d'une stratégie de sélection et de désignation des zones protégées au Canada. Ce document a donc pour buts : d'établir pour l'ensemble du pays une vision commune en matière de zones protégées, des principes de planification clairs, des critères de sélection cohérents pour les sites candidats et des processus décisionnels comparables; d'étudier les répercussions économiques et les facteurs écologiques avant toute décision sur la désignation ou la proclamation d'une zone; de donner aux intéressés la possibilité de participer activement aux décisions concernant les zones protégées; d'imaginer des mesures indicatives susceptibles d'amener les entreprises, les organisations à but non lucratif et les particuliers à céder des terres pour la création de zones protégées; et d'appuyer le droit des Autochtones au maintien de l'usage traditionnel de leurs terres et de les inciter à soutenir activement les objectifs de protection des zones protégées. CA DE EV NR PW SC

Qualifications and training

By David Cruickshank. Victoria : Gove Inquiry Into Child Protection, 1995. 159 p. : ill. MICROLOG 96-05734 (2 fiche)

The story of Matthew Vaudreuil's life and death as revealed in the Gove Inquiry raises fundamental questions about the qualifications and training of those who managed his case and who delivered services directly. The Inquiry made it apparent that background qualifications did not equip British Columbia social services workers to identify the characteristics of normal child development, understand the capacity of a mentally challenged parent, identify a pattern of neglect, identify appropriate parenting skills, and conduct assessments of the child and family. The Inquiry also identified a number of training deficits common to those who handled Matthew's case. This report reviews various issues arising out of the inquiry regarding child welfare worker qualifications and training: the types of workers needing training on child welfare issues, previously reported criticism of social work qualifications and training, educational qualifications of child welfare positions, orientation training and probationary employment, continuing professional development, and management use of training objectives. The report ends with recommendations regarding child welfare worker qualifications and training. The appendix includes lists of core competencies, a proposed core training model, and a list of training programs. BC CI LA PR SA SS

Qualifying for Unemployment Insurance : an empirical analysis of Canada

This paper studies the effect of unemployment insurance (UI) on employment durations, taking advantage of a unique accidental experiment in the Canadian UI system which created an exogenous increase in the entrance requirement (length of time needed to work to qualify for benefits) of up to four weeks in some regions. The effects of this increase are identified primarily by comparing the hazard rate out of employment for the experimental year (1990) with that for the preceding year in regions where other parameters of the UI system did not change. To control for observable individual, job, and labour market characteristics, a duration model is included. The mechanisms by which the apparent adjustments to the change in the entrance requirement are examined. The difference in entrance requirement effects between employment spells ending in layoffs and ending in quits is noted. CA DE LA SS

Quality assurance and public accountability : the legislative framework

By David Cruickshank. Victoria : Gove Inquiry Into Child Protection, 1995. 28 p. MICROLOG 96-05737 (1 fiche)

Examines the goals of quality assurance and accountability, and the existing legislative framework for accountability in British Columbia. Existing legislated quality assurance tools (internal and external), administrative and judicial accountability tools, and gaps in quality assurance and judicial review mechanisms are reviewed. Public confidence in accountability mechanisms is discussed in relation to child and youth welfare issues, with reference to the roles of judges, the new Child, Youth and Family Advocate, and the new Child and Family Review Board. Finally, the experience of other jurisdictions with various quality assurance and accountability options is reviewed. These options include a child and youth advocate, the status review of children in care, complaints and appeals systems, mediation, administrative review tribunals, critical incident and fatality reviews, and imposing liability and compensation.

Créé en 1984, le Dispositif d'alerte rapide pour les pluies acides (DNARPA) a pour objectif de détecter les premiers signes de dégâts dans les forêts du Canada et de surveiller l'évolution de la végétation et des sols forestiers. Le DNARPA consiste en plus de 100 parcelles. Le personnel du Relevé des insectes et des maladies des arbres (RIMA) se charge d'établir les parcelles du DNARPA et d'en faire l'évaluation. Le RIMA doit préciser la nature et l'intensité de tous les dégâts causés à la forêt par des facteurs naturels (insectes, maladies ou conditions météorologiques) ou anthropiques (pratiques d'aménagement ou pollution atmosphérique). Ce rapport décrit l'état de santé des conifères et des feuillus croissant dans les diverses régions du Canada. En août 1989, le groupe de travail interministériel sur l'industrie minière (GTIM) a établi un Sous-comité chargé d'étudier la nature de la participation autochtone à l'industrie minière au Canada. Les objectifs ont été définis comme suit : tout en tenant bien compte des différences régionales et des exigences des divers projets d'exploitation minière, appuyer de documents les 'meilleures pratiques', sans perdre de vue l'aspect réaliste des coûts et avantages propres à chacun. Aussi, découvrir de nouvelles méthodes permettant d'adapter le mode de vie des autochtones aux débouchés offerts par l'industrie minière; définir les moyens concrets que les gouvernements, les sociétés minières, les groupes et les particuliers autochtones peuvent adopter pour accroître sensiblement la participation des autochtones à l'exploitation minière; et examiner les moyens de stimuler la participation et d'éliminer les obstacles sur le plan légal et structurel afin d'accélérer la progression vers l'objectif d'augmenter la participation des autochtones à l'industrie minière au Canada. Ce rapport présente un bibliographie sélective commentée; un rapport démographique entre les autochtones et l'exploitation minière; les programmes et politiques gouvernementaux axés sur la participation des autochtones à l'exploitation minière; et les 'meilleures études de cas relatives à la participation des autochtones à l'exploitation minière. Les principaux secteurs miniers au Canada sont présentés en carte.

Examines the issue of interprovincial trade barriers in Canada, beginning with a review of the context of the interprovincial trade situation: the volume of interprovincial trade in Canada, the methods used to calculate the costs of trade barriers, and the costs of the trade barriers themselves. Also reviews the latest federal-provincial initiative to tackle trade barriers, the July 1994 Agreement on Internal Trade. Outlines the operating principles and objective of the Agreement, its six major general rules, and specific rules relating to government procurement, business investment and incentives, labour mobility, agriculture, alcoholic beverages, electricity distribution, institutional provisions to implement and monitor the Agreement, and dispute resolution procedures.

Aerial seeding as an alternative technique for black spruce regeneration has largely been discontinued in Ontario due to a general failure to produce adequately stocked stands. However, recent trials have led to the development of new prescriptions for aerially seeding black spruce. This report describes a trial designed to examine the effectiveness of these prescriptions in conjunction with two types of site preparation in the Red Lake District. The site chosen was an upland black spruce/jack pine stand situated on deep, gently rolling, fresh to moist silt to silty sand. Fifth year results are presented in terms of seeding densities, comparison between aerially seeded and non-seeded control blocks, comparison between sites prepared using the two methods, and percentage of seedlings in the aerially seeded block that were attributed to the aerial seeding operation.

A Reference target frame and fish deflection weir for fixed-location riverine hydroacoustic systems

ISSN 0706-6473) CCG-P no. Fs 97-4/2347E
MICROLOG 96-05536 (1 fiche)

The riverine environment presents unique difficulties for operating fixed-location hydroacoustic enumeration sites. In systems with moderate to fast flows, fish tend to migrate along banks and are bottom-oriented. Bank-mounted transducers are therefore liable to encounter interference from fish migrating through the near-field of the transducer. High currents and turbulent flow make calibrations and experiments using acoustic targets difficult to perform. This report describes a system developed to address those problems: a deflection weir and target frame constructed for use with a split-beam hydroacoustic system. The weir forces fish to migrate through the acoustic beam at a distance well beyond the near field. The target frame holds the targets stationary within the acoustic beam, making calibrations and experiments possible. The weir and frame also have application to single- and dual-beam hydroacoustic systems.

Sections of the report examine the rationale for regulation of social workers, the regulatory options, currently used options to regulate social work in British Columbia, characteristics of an effective approach to social work regulation, whether current regulatory options possess those characteristics, the types of services provided by social workers, and risks of harm associated with social work services. The final section examines implications of retaining the status quo and of creating a formal licensing system for social workers in British Columbia. Le domaine des gentils au Québec a connu un essor considérable depuis les débuts des années 1980. Nous ne reprenons pas dans ce document l'examen de toute la problématique, largement exposée dans l'introduction du précédent Répertoire, auquel on se reportera pour plus d'informations, de même qu'aux ouvrages et articles signalés dans la bibliographie du supplément. Nous tentons, dans ce document, d'évoquer à grands traits les développements majeurs survenus dans ce dossier depuis 1987, de dégager les caractéristiques de ce travail et de guider les lecteurs dans les ramifications de l'architecture générale du volume. Plus précisément, les points suivants y sont abordés : échos multiples d'un phénomène éclaté; popularité outre-Atlantique; gentilité québécoise; caractéristiques du Supplément 1995; et, Guide d'utilisation.

Report and recommendations of the Judicial Compensation Committee, 1995

Manitoba Judicial Compensation Committee. Winnipeg : The Committee, 1995. 32 p.
MICROLOG 96-05524 (1 fiche)

Presents the findings and recommendations of a committee established to review, determine, and report to the Manitoba Minister of Justice on the salaries and benefits payable to provincial judges. The current committee was appointed in 1992 but takes into account the findings of the first committee (fiche 92-00525), appointed in 1989. Issues considered in the review include the level of judges' salaries in Manitoba compared to those in other provinces, and compared to salaries paid to such persons as senior Crown attorneys and lawyers in private practice; whether to improve the new supplemental pension benefit formula; how the formula should be applied; and the extent of other benefits (mileage allowances, meal allowances, and incidental expense allowances).

Issues examined in the inquiry were: whether the plea arrangement entered into by Crown counsel with Homolka in May 1993 was appropriate in all the circumstances; whether the advice given by Crown counsel in connection with possible charges against Homolka arising out of a sexual assault on Jane Doe was appropriate in all the circumstances; and whether it is appropriate or feasible to take further proceedings against Homolka for her part in the sexual assault and in the deaths of two other women. Specific topics discussed include whether Homolka's acts were entirely voluntary, the need to preserve the integrity of the judicial process, and the need for Homolka's evidence at the related trial of Paul Bernardo (Teale).

This study was designed to provide a semi-quantitative assessment of intertidal biota at a number of sites in Saanich Inlet on Vancouver Island. These sites were selected based on their potential for being representative of particular habitat types and various regions of the Inlet. A few sites were also assessed in the shallow subtidal to determine whether there were significant differences in overall species diversity and composition between regions adjacent to either side of the low tide line. The data from the survey are used together with published information for other geographic areas to identify species which are potentially sensitive to various anthropogenic stressors. Separate sections of this report cover the assessment of intertidal sensitive species, habitats, and biodiversity; hexactinellid sponge habitats and the significance of those sponges to the Inlet; and an assessment of eelgrass habitat. Appendices include lists of species found at intertidal survey sites; a field survey report on Saanich Inlet eelgrass; and eelgrass distribution maps.

Presents the findings of a study of Saskatchewan forest fire policy, prompted by the significant losses and expenditures incurred during the 1995 forest fire season. The following policy questions were examined: whether the province should take responsibility for forest fire suppression; who should pay for the suppression; who should control fire suppression sources; and the options for delivery of the fire program. Interjurisdictional comparisons dealing with the costs and policy of fire suppression are made, and socio-economic factors affecting commerce reliant on forest fires are examined. The cost benefit of protecting private property situated on Crown land and the value to the forest industry and province of the forest resource are also taken into account. Fire program options assessed range from no government support to fire exclusion at all costs. Recommendations are given for the province's future forest fire management program. Appendices provide background information such as fire season statistics, serviceability records, a report on the value of Saskatchewan forests, policy directives, an interim forest fire policy study, and a glossary of fire management terms.

Scientific criteria document for the development of an interim provincial water quality objective for aniline

By R.V. Angelow and N. Bazinet. Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, 1996. iv, 29 p. : Bibl.
ISBN 0-7729-7328-8
MICROLOG 96-05580 (1 fiche)

The purpose of this document is to develop an interim provincial water quality objective for aniline for the protection of aquatic life in Ontario. It reviews the sources of aniline in the environment, its environmental fate and properties, acute and chronic toxicity as determined from results reported in the literature on toxicity tests using vertebrates and invertebrates, the bioaccumulation of aniline in the environment, mutagenic effects, and threshold aniline concentrations affecting fish odour and taste. The document then explains the derivation of the interim water quality objective. Water quality criteria for aniline developed in other jurisdictions are noted.

Summarises operational aspects and results of a seabed mapping survey conducted in July 1995 over parts of the Scotian Shelf. Specific objectives of the survey were to familiarise crew with survey procedures, map surficial features and resolve objects greater than 0.3 metres in diameter, map the lateral extent and depth of LaHave clay overlying glacial till or bedrock ridges, map distribution of gas escape craters and other features, and map seabed features and thickness of the Quaternary sediment sequence. Includes an overview of Scotian Shelf geomorphology and Quaternary geology, survey geophysical equipment, and survey logistics. Results from each of the four primary survey locations are presented as a series of interpreted archetype acoustical images.

The Agreement on Internal Trade (AIT) is a non-binding political accord among the federal, provincial, and territorial governments that aims to remove internal trade barriers in Canada. This paper is concerned with the question of how, given the apparent limited potential of the AIT as it now stands to remove barriers to economic mobility in Canada, we should best proceed to strengthen the Canadian economic union. The first part of the paper considers options for giving legal force to the AIT itself, or at least to some of its provisions. The second part reviews options for giving greater political legitimacy and weight to the AIT so that it influences governments in a non-legal manner. The third part considers the alternative of constitutional litigation as a means of removing barriers to internal trade, and briefly examines recent Supreme Court of Canada jurisprudence with respect to Charter mobility rights as well as the limits of provincial jurisdiction. The fourth part reviews federal constitutional powers to pursue economic integration through harmonising legislation that may impinge on areas of provincial jurisdiction. The final part addresses the impact of globalisation and international trade obligations on barriers to interprovincial trade.

Access to reliable cost information is important for evaluating operational aspects of the present system of forest seed collection in Ontario, and for comparative analysis of alternative methods of forest regeneration. This report provides seed collection and processing cost estimates for the primary species used in the province's artificial regeneration program. The report considers Ministry of Natural Resources staff time, cone collection contracts, contract administration costs, shipping, seed processing and storage costs, as well as capital depreciation, in estimating the average costs of: bulked-stand cone collections for nine conifers; seed collections for six selected hardwoods; and orchard seed from the tree improvement program in Ontario. Trends in costs over the 1975-92 period are noted.

Presents results of trials using an electrostatic separation system to separate different types of waste plastics from one another, with the eventual goal of developing an effective dry process for separating plastics collected in municipal recycling schemes. Experiments were performed in batch mode using mixtures of such plastics as polyvinyl chloride, polyethylene terephthalate, high density polyethylene, polypropylene, and polystyrene. Average size of the material processed was 2 to 5 millimetres. Results are presented in terms of extract content (or purity) and percent recovery. Effects of important process parameters were also evaluated.

This report presents research conducted to examine factors affecting HIV/AIDS prevention, care, and support in Alberta, and assesses the government response to those factors. In preparation for a more formal strategic planning process. The research involved a literature review of strategic plans in other jurisdictions. Interviews with informants in various facets of HIV/AIDS, a provider/client survey, and focus group sessions with specific HIV/AIDS consumer and service provider groups. The report begins by describing the current status of HIV/AIDS and related programming in Alberta, noting progress made to date. Strengths in these programs are identified along with future challenges in the areas of HIV/AIDS prevention and control, education of workers, epidemiological surveillance, diagnosis and testing, care and treatment, research and evaluation, and other issues. Finally, the key success factors to be considered in HIV/AIDS prevention, control, and management are listed and various strategic planning options are outlined. Recommendations for strategic planning are made, based on the research and consultations conducted.

Shared servicing for rural cohousing, a sustainable approach to rural habitation

By John A. Zsolt. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1994. xv, 177 p. : ill., Bibl. MICROLOG 96-05704 (3 fiche)

As a viable alternative option to the standard development of rural subdivisions, cohousing offers many advantages. Cohousing can take on many different forms, from a tight cluster of independent dwellings to a low-rise multiple unit; ownership can be communal and shared facilities such as daycare and common rooms are an important part of the cohousing concept. This study examines cohousing as an option for rural development in Ontario by focusing on the four systems (sewage treatment, water supply, storm water control, and heating) required for the servicing of a group of 30 clustered dwellings. Summaries are provided of the viable alternatives available for that scale of development and capable of working effectively in a northern climate. A holistic approach is used when analysing these systems to ensure adherence to principles of sustainability. The study also presents a theoretical housing model to demonstrate the importance of integrated design in forming sustainable communities and to indicate the many unexplored possibilities for rural housing.

In one experiment, planting position (centre versus side) within mechanically site-prepared corridors was evaluated. The 1,800 seedlings planted in each of the four experiments were assessed after five and 11 growing seasons in the field (north-eastern Ontario's boreal forest region). Three of the experimental sites are on upland, mixedwood, herb-rich plots; the fourth is on a feathermoss-Sphagnum site type. Performance results are presented in terms of such factors as total height, height increment, basal diameter, mortality, and competition index.

Describes and presents results from a study in which wind-driven rain and its interaction with buildings were modelled physically. The effects of wind direction and wind speed on wetting patterns, and effects of building height and architectural features such as cornices and balconies, were examined in a wind tunnel using scale model buildings oriented at various angles to the wind direction. A visual picture of the wetting patterns on the building faces was obtained using water-sensitive paper that changed colour immediately on contact with water. This method also allowed a quantitative analysis to be performed by sizing the droplet stains on the paper, and local intensity factors which relate the wetting rate to rainfall rate were calculated for selected locations.

Presents results of laboratory trials conducted to determine the suitability of selected silica sand deposits in Manitoba as a raw material for manufacturing sodium silicates. The first stage of trials consisted of the beneficiation of two composite silica sand samples representing the Swan River Formation and Black Island deposits of the Winnipeg Formation. Standard processing methods of de-sliming, attrition scrubbing (including acid scrubbing), magnetic separation, and screening were employed to upgrade the test samples to the sizing and chemical requirements of sodium silicate producers. The second stage involved melt fusion tests in which the beneficiated sand was mixed with specified amounts of trona. Tests were also conducted using Illinois silica sand as an industry standard for comparative evaluation of performance. The third stage consisted of production of liquid sodium silicate in an autoclave, and assessing its conformity to industry standards.

Each series of test specimens included a case with 15.9-millimetre Type X gypsum board and Type G1 glass fibre batts. The test approach was based on constructing framing and then using that framing for a group of tests to permit comparisons with a sequence of small changes from specimen to specimen. Comparisons were made for changes in screw patterns, gypsum board layers, insulation, presence of resilient furring channels, stud placement, and stud material (wood or steel).

The British Columbia Ministry of Social Services obtains most of its child welfare help through contracts with agencies, contractors, foster parents, and individuals providing special skills and experience. Contract arrangements are based largely on the traditional model of contracting at the lowest price and then maintaining an arm's-length relationship with the contractors. This paper studies the need for standards in social service contracting and begins with a review of the history of efforts to develop and implement standards for Ministry contracting. Issues are identified relating to weaknesses in standards, monitoring, evaluating, and correcting child welfare and protection in the province, and recommendations for reform are made. Specific issues considered include accountability, quality assurance, implementation of standards, enforcement, and staff professionalism and discretion to make decisions.

The analysis uses a large longitudinal data set created by combining Human Resource Development Canada's Status Vector File and T4 Supplementary File. Probability of using UI is examined in relation to such factors as the business cycle, previous UI use, age, and province, and models are developed for estimating the effect of exposure to the UI system on subsequent UI use. The implications of the results are discussed and the effects of three UI policy options (lengthening the qualification period, decreasing number of weeks of benefits, lowering the income replacement rate) on infrequent and frequent users of UI are estimated.

By Richard Salmon and Albertine Van Ogtrop. Thunder Bay, ON : Ministry of Natural Resources, Northwest Region Science & Technology, 1996. viii, 20 p. : ill., Bibl. (Technical report / Ontario. Northwest Region Science & Technology ; no. 102 ISSN 1992-8654)
MICROLOG 96-05599 (1 fiche)

Examines the status of the lake whitefish (Coregonus clupeaformis) fishery in Lake Nipigon by studying various biological indicators to determine if the lake whitefish population is unduly stressed by exploitation. The indicators examined were yield, abundance, growth, maturity, age structure, year-class strength, mean age, mortality, and spawning opportunities. The interaction between lake whitefish and rainbow smelt (Osmerus mordax) was also examined. The status of the lake whitefish fishery is then based on the accumulated evidence of stress revealed by the indicators studied. Recommendations are provided for conservation of lake whitefish stocks.

Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1991. 22 p. : ill.
MICROLOG 96-05703 (1 fiche)

Describes the design of a house that can be expanded and changed according to the evolving life styles and needs of the occupants. Three variations of the small-hot, detached housing type are presented. The three-storey plus basement design uses the same basic floor plan, footprint, and exterior design envelope to create a starter house with unfinished basement and third floor, a completed house to accommodate a large family, and a house containing an accessory unit to accommodate two households. The three variations comprise a two-bedroom, split-entry, gable form; a four-bedroom split-entry bungalow form; and a 2x2-bedroom level-entry gable form.

A Study to integrate tourism and sports in Manitoba : final report

Presented to: Industry Canada, Tourism, Manitoba Region ; by: Matrix Management. Winnipeg : The Consultants, 1994. v, 106 p. : Bibl. Source of document: Manitoba Industry, Trade and Tourism. MICROLOG 96-05275 (2 fiche)

The purpose of this study was to develop an overall strategy for linking tourism with sports as a new growth industry in Manitoba. The study document begins with an analysis of trends which impact on society in general and on the tourism and sports industries in particular. Implications for tourism and sports in Manitoba are discussed. The study then profiles the visitors to Manitoba who actively participate in sports or attend sports events while in the province. It also identifies and profiles Manitoba sports products, with two case studies of communities that have been successful in capitalising on sports for tourism results. Finally, the study presents a sports tourism strategy that includes an implementation plan, identifying the roles that key organisations in the province could undertake to expand this industry opportunity.

Concerns that larger fish species may not be suitable as monitors of localised environments has resulted in new techniques for examining biochemical disruptions in smaller fish species. This study used these new methods to identify the potential of small fish species in monitoring effects of pulp mill effluents on the Athabasca River. The investigators first identified common sentinel species immediately upstream and downstream of pulp mill effluents at Hinton and Whitecourt. They conducted laboratory analyses on fish tissues from the two sentinel species identified (spoonhead sculpin and lake chub) to determine the potential for the pulp mill effluents to disrupt sex steroid levels and induce liver mixed-function oxidase activity. The fish specimens were collected in spring and fall during low flow periods.

Browsing damage in young conifer plantations occurs mainly from hare and deer feeding in late fall, winter, and spring, when leafy herbaceous growth is unavailable. At high levels, browsing can severely reduce tree growth and survival. This paper presents a survey initiated to determine the current level of browsing damage in young conifer plantations in eastern and central Nova Scotia, to examine the level of susceptibility of various reforestation species to browsing, and to investigate the influence of site factors on browsing. The survey examined 34 plantations, sampling and recording observations of tree status, microsite characteristics, vegetative competition, and degree of lateral and terminal browsing. Hare and deer populations were also estimated.

Technological change is a global process affecting many different aspects of work, the organisation, and life in the workplace. To facilitate the process of adjusting to such change, this paper proposes an assessment and intervention approach based on co-operation between the different players involved in the process of change. It uses a fictitious example, derived from several case studies, to illustrate how the proposed intervention strategies can be applied. This example helps to identify several elements that enable definition of a viewpoint on the issue of technological change within organisations. The paper then describes some of the methods that can be used to apply a global management approach for implementing technological change. It concludes with a look at why and how the authors promote a design, implementation, and management process that is based on the involvement of all those affected by the change, beginning with front-line users.

The main theme of this book is that technology is central to the development process, and that African economies need deep technological revolutions to bring about rapid structural shifts and build up endogenous technological capability. The book begins with a framework for understanding deindustrialisation and technological stagnation in sub-Saharan Africa. It then presents 26 case studies of technology management and policy, technical change and innovation, technology diffusion and transfer, technological capability, and the role of women in technological change. Subjects of these studies include the Nigerian coal industry, power generation in Zimbabwe, grain milling in Ethiopia, oil refining in Sierra Leone, agri-food processing, women-owned enterprises, the Nigerian cement and steel industries, farming in Kenya, university research and industrial innovation in Kenya and Nigeria, and the Tanzanian textile industry.

Presents a review of the spatial and temporal distribution of the historical oceanographic data set on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and on Flemish Cap along the standard transect adopted by the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries (47 degrees north latitude). Includes a brief descriptive analysis of various indices describing the temperature field along the transect and a discussion of the 1951-95 time series of the cross-sectional area of the cold intermediate layer. Annual time series of temperature, salinity, and density (sigma-t) are presented for the Avalon Channel, central Grand Bank, shelf edge, Flemish Pass, Flemish Cap, and Atlantic Ocean continental slope areas along the transect, based on all data available from 1931 to 1995. In addition, the monthly averaged vertical cross-sections for 1931-95 are presented, followed by monthly transects by year. AP CA CF ND NR SC

Over the past two or three decades, North America has witnessed a revolution in attitudes towards tobacco smoking. What was once considered a normal habit has become increasingly socially unacceptable. An ever-growing number of non-smokers are much less tolerant of smoking, and anti-smoking activists have become very vocal in their opposition to the habit. This document looks at tobacco smoking. Topics covered are: social perceptions of tobacco use; health risks from smoking and second-hand smoke; trends in smoking behaviour; the anti-smoking movement; and, government action. ### Toward a shared destiny : Government of Saskatchewan Aboriginal policy framework

Regina : Saskatchewan Indian & Métis Affairs Secretariat, 1994. 16 p. MICROLOG 96-05494 (1 fiche)

The purpose of this framework is to set forth the policies, guidelines, and procedures that the Saskatchewan government has adopted to facilitate its working relationship with Indian and Métis peoples and organisations. It begins with a review of the context of the framework (legal basis, demographic trends, socio-economic conditions, jurisdictional context), then presents the policy framework's vision and principles. Five priorities are outlined for action through which the vision is to be achieved. Major activity areas are described in the categories of protocols with Indian and Métis organisations, self-government, treaty land entitlement, and specific claims. The framework also reviews the strengths of Indian and Métis communities as bases for future development; the development of partnerships; opportunities for economic self-sufficiency and employment; and the provincial race and cultural relations policy. Community Behavioral Services, part of the Alberta Dept. of Family & Social Services, provides a variety of social supports to individuals with mental disabilities and challenging behaviour. In September 1993, the administrative structure of the agency was changed from a hierarchical structure to one in which self-directed work teams report directly to the Director. This report describes the impact of this change over a one-year period. It reviews the background activity that led to the introduction of the concept of self-direction to the agency, describes the new structure, and evaluates the benefits of the change according to such measures of outcome as staff satisfaction, staff skills, client satisfaction, trust levels within teams, and team functioning. Un nombre croissant de non-fumeurs sont devenus beaucoup moins tolérants vis-à-vis l'usage du tabac, et la volx du lobby antitabac s'est amplifiée pour dénoncer cette habitude. Ce document se penche précisément sur l'usage du tabac. Les points qui y sont abordés sont : évolution des attitudes à l'égard du tabac; problèmes de santé liés à l'usage du tabac et à la fumée secondaire; tendances dans la consommation de tabac; le mouvement antitabac; la culture du tabac; et les mesures gouvernementales.

In the first phase of research, various experimental paradigms and procedures were explored using a locomotive simulator video tape to trigger operator stimuli. Electroencephalogram (EEG) measurements were made on the experimental subjects attending to the simulator tape. The second phase involved a task in which the subject had to brake a train and stop it on target, using a computer graphic simulation. EEG contingent negative variation and magnetoencephalography (MEG) were measured to study the sensitivity of manipulations of a 36-hour sleep deficit paradigm to direct measures of brain function.

Reliable methods of pollen storage are valuable for tree breeding programs. Good pollen viability during storage can be maintained by reducing its moisture content and by regulating temperature, humidity, and atmosphere. This paper describes a study conducted to determine: the effects of vacuum processing on black spruce and white spruce pollen viability; the temperature requirements for one-year storage; the effects of different levels of pollen moisture content during storage; the effects of low oxygen pressure during storage; and the effects of temperature fluctuation on pollen viability during storage. Vacuum processing performance was also compared to the performance of processing using a calcium sulphate desiccator.

This paper evaluates SILVAH, a stand growth simulator commonly used in the north-eastern United States, by comparing predicted and actual growth of tolerant hardwoods in southern Ontario. Data came from 139 managed or unmanaged stands, even- or uneven-aged. The data were used to test the accuracy of diameter distribution, basal area, mean quadratic diameter at breast height, number of trees per hectare, and stand volume predictions for periods of five to 20 years. Factors affecting the accuracy of the model are discussed.

The information is required to determine if there is a range of building airtightness within which there are no indoor air quality or high humidity problems. The test data are compared with similar data obtained from Ontario houses, permitting estimation of the minimum ventilation required to keep the levels of various indoor pollutants within acceptable levels. Additional observations were also made in eight of the test houses to study the effects of living habits and of various ventilation systems on the quality of indoor air and on indoor humidity levels, and to estimate the actual ventilation rates under various operating conditions.

Winter swath grazing

Regina : Grazing & Pasture Technology Program, 1996. 10 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-88656-664-9 MICROLOG 96-05519 (1 fiche)

A cattle producer using winter swath grazing (WSG) will seed an annual spring cereal crop in June and lay the crop in windrows on the field in September. In November, when bale feeding would traditionally start, the cattle are turned onto the windrows. This publication provides suggestions for those wishing to implement WSG in Saskatchewan, including information on when to seed the forage crop, what type of crop to plant, seeding rate, fertilisation, weed control, swathage, when to start grazing, snow depth and crusting concerns, field size, watering, WSG economics, forage yield and quality, costs, provision of cattle shelter, and wildlife predation.

The Young Offenders Act — Rev.

By Philip Rosen. Ottawa : Library of Parliament, Research Branch, 1995. 23 p. : Bibl. (Current issue review / Canada. Library of Parliament. Research Branch ; 86-13E) French ed. (La Loi sur les jeunes...) on the same fiche. Revised 5 September 1995. ISBN 0-660-16312-8 CCG-P no. YM32-1/86-13-1995-09E MICROLOG 96-05274 (1 fiche)

The Young Offenders Act adopts what is known as the "justice" model of juvenile criminal justice. Such a model continues to recognize the special needs and the vulnerability of youth, but also places emphasis on both protection of the public, and the rights of young people. The result is a considerably more detailed and explicit code governing criminal proceedings against youth. This document looks at the Young Offenders Act. The emphasis is less on social intervention, and more on the delineation of rights and obligations.

Youth-on-youth

By Teresa Lum. Victoria : Gove Inquiry into Child Protection, 1995. 18 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 96-05738 (1 fiche)

Summarises the input to the Gove Inquiry on Child Protection from about 300 youth across British Columbia, written by a former youth in care. Examines gaps in the child welfare system and related issues from a youth consumer perspective in the following categories: advocacy for the interests of abused youth or youth in care; reporting of abuse and neglect; apprehension of youth for removal to a more protective environment; and life in care of the child welfare system. Recommendations for improvement are made in each category.
